VAST THRONG OUT FOR BIG RACE; YALE AND HARVARD CREWS READY

CAPTAIN BACON (NO. 6) OF HARVARD VARSITY CREW, READY FOR THE START

Snapshot of the Son of the Assistant Secretary of State of the United States, as He Appears at His Oar in the Crimson Shell.

High Wind Lashes Thames Into White Caps, and Preliminary Events of the Morning Were Postponed—Varsity Race Scheduled at 1:30 P. M., if Weather Permits.

NEW LONDON, Ct., June 27.—A strong wind came up suddenly to-day and knocked the Yale-Harvard boat race schedule into a cocked hat. It was intended to row the freshman and the varsity four-oared races at 1 o'clock, but the rough water which developed when the wind came caused a postponement of these races, and it was announced that they would be rowed after the varsity eights settle their question of supremacy at 1:30 p. m, if the big event takes place at that hour.

Over the telephone from Red Top to New London came the message: "Water conditions may make it necessary to row the varsity race after sundown."

This followed the postponement of the two earlier races and, although it was not "official," things began to look dismal. The throng of race-goers waiting around the New London railroad station for the observation trains began to troop off up town to the hotels.

The Thames was full of white caps, and the wind came stiffly from the northwest, churning the water so as to make racing impossible.

The river was brilliant with yachts and launches decorated with flags and streamers, and everything was ready for the races except the wind and water which held the whip hand all morning and refused to be subdued.

The crews remained at their quarters awaiting word from the referee's boat. The postponement disappointed hundreds who had gathered at the railroad stations to take the observation train. The greater number of these were women, young, merry and prettily dressed. Pink is the color of the boat race girl this year, regardless of whether her allegiance is given to Crimson or blue. The color of the crowd at the station was that of a pink rose garden. There were pink dresses, pink hats, pink parasols and floating veils of pink chiffon. It was an impartial color, harmonizing equally well with the colors of Cambridge and New Haven.

Harvard drew the east course, which gives Yale a slight advantage at the start but the course on the whole is favorable to the Crimson.

BARRY IS NAMED AGAIN ON ARBITRATION BOARD

GOVERNOR GUILD MAKES BIG BATCH OF APPOINTMENTS TO-DAY.

At the meeting of the Executive Council today Governor Guild reappointed Richard P. Barry of Lynn as a member of the board of conciliation and arbitration.

The following board of boiler inspection rules was appointed: Joseph H. McNeill of Melrose, chairman; Hiram MM. Beck of Everett, John A. Stevens of Lowell, Frank H. Keyes of Newton, for three years, and Robert J. Dunkle of Boston for two years. Benjamin C. Cowvell of Tisbury was appointed pilot for the port of New Bedford, for Buzzards' Bay and Vineyard Sound.

The governor also reappointed Augustus L. Chase, M. D., of Randolph to the board of registration in medicine; William N. Taylor of Malden as clerk of the First District Court of Eastern Middlesex, and Emerson W. Law of Cambridge clerk of the District Court of Eastern Middlesex.

There were many candidates for the position to which Richard P. Barry of Lynn was reappointed, including Dennis D. Driscoll, secretary and treasurer of the State branch, American Federation of Labor; Henry Sterling, secretary of the Boston Typographical Union; George L. Cain of Lynn, Samuel Ross of New Bedford, William Acton of Fall River and John S. County of Taunton. Although it has been represented that other industries than the shoe workers were not in favor of Mr. Barry, the secretary of the Fall River Textile Council wrote the governor that the council had voted to ask the governor to reappoint Mr. Barry. Similar endorsements were received from many other labor organizations.

The Board on Boiler Rules was appointed in accordance with the recommendation of the governor in the legislature this year, a bill having passed which provides that the chief inspector of the boiler inspection department of the district police shall be chairman of the board; that one member shall represent the boiler using interests of the Commonwealth and another the boiler manufacturing interests; the fourth shall be an operating engineer, and the fifth shall represent the boiler insurance interests. Of the members appointed to-day, Mr. Beck is the operating engineer, John A. Stevens represents the boiler using interests, Fred H. Keyes the boiler manufacturing interests, and Robert J. Dunkle the boiler insurance interests.

100 PAPER MAKERS QUIT MAINE MILL

SOUTH BREWER, Me., June 27.—Owing to differences arising over the discharge of an employe, 100 workmen in the paper mill of the Eastern Manufacturing Company's plant quit work last night, and will remain out until the man is reinstated.

Alleged Kidnapper Returned to Jail.

DAUGHTER FACES STRAINE

Man Pleads Not Guilty but Is Unable to Furnish $1,300 Bail.

Dorothy Straine, $80,000 heiress, to-day in the District Court at Dedham faced her father, Robert F. Straine, for the first time since he attempted to kidnap her from the home of Mrs. Joseph Hurd at Wellesley last Thursday night, following her graduation from the fashionable Dana Hall School.

Straine and Miss Annie M. Duncan, the mysterious nurse, who was his companion on the raid on his daughter's room in Wellesley, both pleaded not guilty before Judge Emery Grover to charges of assault and battery on Marie Le Blanc, the governess, and assault with intent to kidnap Dorothy Straine.

Straine failed to put up the required bond of $1,000, while Annie M. Duncan was allowed to go on her own recognizance. The former State street financier was taken back handcuffed to the Salem jail.

Straine Manacled.

Straine, heavily manacled to Deputy Sheriff Cobb of Salem, came to Dedham this morning on an early train. On the same train was Mrs. Annie M. Duncan, the mysterious woman who has figured so cloudily in the case, and Mr. and Mrs. James Imrey of No. 2 James street, proprietors of the house where Straine is alleged to have leased a suite of rooms and padded them to confine "two demented women."

Mrs. Emily Hurd of Wellesley, from whose house the attempt to kidnap Dorothy Straine was made, and Jeremiah Cullinan and Jeremiah McLean, the two Wellesley men who prevented his doing so and who aided in his arrest, all came on the same train from Boston.

Prisoners Talk Excitedly.

Straine and the deputy were driven to the court house, while the others walked. In the court room, which was crowded, Straine sat on a bench near the prisoner's cage, while Mrs. Duncan sat for a time among the spectators with the Glancys, with whom she seemed to be on the best of terms.

Later she removed to the bench where Straine sat and a most animated conversation was carried on between them in whispers.

At 10:01 Clerk Sanborn called:

"Robert Straine."

and faced Judge Grover.

"You are complained of for assault and battery on Miss Marie LeBlanc and assault with intent to kidnap. What say you, are you guilty or not guilty?" demanded the clerk.

"Not Guilty," Says Straine.

"Not guilty," said Straine. He is a man about sixty years of age, of iron-gray hair, less than average height, heavily built, somewhat heavy of face, with double chin. He was clad in a blue serge business suit. Straine seemed to be entirely self-poised.

"Annie M. Duncan," called the clerk.

Mrs. Duncan, about thirty-five, but well preserved, tall and slender, with luminous black eyes, stood before him. She was clad in a dark cloak, black silk skirt, white shirt waist, and wore a black palm leaf hat, trimmed with brown velvet and chiffon.

The same charge was detailed by the clerk.

"How plead you?"

"Not guilty," she responded in a firm, low tone.

About fifteen minutes after the case had been called, Miss Dorothy Straine and Miss Marie LeBlanc, her governess, accompanied by Attorney Gorham of the law firm which is trustee of her estate, entered the court room. Miss Straine was clad entirely in blue and was heavily veiled. Miss LeBlanc was attired in black and was also heavily veiled.

Straine Peers at Daughter.

At the moment the young women entered the room, Straine seemed to feel their presence, although they made little noise. He turned in his seat and peered long at his daughter.

Apparently she was oblivious to this, for she was not seen to look his way from the time she entered the room until she left when the date for the continued hearing was announced.

Then Miss Straine, Attorney Gorham and the governess rapidly went to their automobile and were whirled away.

Attacks Railroads Committee.

Replying to repeated questions from Senator Fetker of Northampton, a member of the Railroad Committee, who demanded to know if, in the opinion of the senator from Middlesex, there really exists a merger question at the present time, Senator Vahey not only replied in the affirmative, but declared that the Committee on Railroads has invited the merger.

"Confronted by a situation which, in the case of an ordinary offender would be met by a fine and imprisonment in jail, they have given Mr. Mellen a hand slap on the wrist," he declared. "They have said to Mr. Mellen: 'If you will be good between now and the first of July of next year, we will try and help you out.'

"After the first of July, 1908, if the New Haven does not come in here to the next Legislature and respectfully ask to be permitted to acquire control of the Boston & Maine, what will happen? Why, the 'friendly interests' will vote their stock for the merger, and there is not any power that can help it, because, so far as we are concerned, we have legislated ourselves out of existence."

"Question of Good Faith."

Senator Vahey said: "The fundamental proposition upon which this whole subject of railroad consolidation or merger rests

SENATOR VAHEY ASKS MERGER REFERENDUM

IN BRILLIANT SPEECH HE STYLES PRESIDENT MELLEN "KING."

In a speech that was eloquently sarcastic, Senator James H. Vahey in the Senate to-day lashed President Charles S. Mellen of the New Haven road for his utter disregard for the laws of the Commonwealth.

"How can we pass unnoticed the brazen, defiant and flippant exhibition in which the president of the New Haven road flourished in our very faces his absolute abandonment of his agreements and his utter disregard for the law of this Commonwealth?" Senator Vahey asked the Senate.

He referred to the "King" who came to the railroad committee hearing surrounded by his retinue, and when he smiled the room looked pleasant and when he scowled they all trembled in the august presence.

"Public conscience and public spirit and the public pride and patriotism revolted at the spectacle which was here presented and it will revolt until this Legislature brings to its bar Charles S. Mellen, president of the New Haven road, and compels him to realize that violation of the laws in Massachusetts will not be tolerated."

In a speech of special importance to the State did Senator Vahey believe the merger question to be ripe enough to be thought there should be a referendum.

BIG BOAT RACE MAY NOT BE ROWED TILL SUNDOWN

Crews Ready, but Water Conditions Make a Contest This Afternoon Improbable.

Sun Shone Brightly on the Gay Crowd, and Only the High Wind Marred Sport.

Bright and Sunny Day.

A bright and glorious sun ushered in this our day of the three hundred and sixty-five on New London's official calendar, the day on which the fleet of Yale and the Crimson of Harvard fight it out on the Thames course for the rowing championship of the rival universities.

The crews were in tip-top condition this morning. At both Red Top and the Yale quarters the men were up early. All were in good shape and there was no further shifting. The crowds continued to pour into New London during the early morning hours. At every hotel accommodations were at a premium.

Hundreds who had not engaged rooms in advance were turned away from the hotels and had to hunt furnished rooms and boarding houses. The specials from New York, Boston and New Haven brought thousands more before noon.

All of the morning trains came in from Boston, New Haven and New York loaded with human freight. Fair-haired girls with their colors, they liked best, old "grads," undergraduates, the curious, the "old-timers"—all are here, and more are coming.

River Crowded with Yachts.

The hotels are full to running over, as the river more yachts are anchored about the finish line than ever before.

In spite of the illness and the withdrawal of Golden Gibas from the Harvard eight, the Harvard crew, with Lunt of the university four-oar substituted, is confident of winning. The handicap has slightly lessened the chances of Harvard in the eyes of the expert oarsmen and the critics, but Harvard followers are not daunted, and they look for a game battle against the superb Yale crew to-day.

While the university crew was rowing, Gibas had a slight chill, but it apparently succumbed to little, and Drs. Manahan and Kinsley are hopeful that Gibas would be all right by morning. But during the night he was feverish and restless, and when he awoke his temperature was very high and he was a really sick boy.

Lunt Has Pluck.

He was ordered to stay in bed, and it was seen at once that he would not be able to row against Yale. Coach Wray and Captain Bacon at once decided to substitute Lunt.

Gibas grew somewhat better as the day went on, and he was able to dress and go to the Fort Griswold house, down the river, where his people are staying. The physicians hope that he will not be seriously ill, but the acute febrile symptoms which he has had for the first twenty-four hours may indefinitely prevent anything.

Lunt, the new man in the eight, has never rowed in a four-oar race, and has been rowing in the four-oar less than a week.

No one knows whether or not he will be able to row to-morrow in the whole distance, but coach and captain are absolutely certain of his pluck and courage, and are sure that as long as he lasts, he will work for all there is in him.

Considered Good Rower.

Lunt rowed No. 6 in his freshman eight last year. There are now in the Harvard varsity eight, adding Lunt to another, three men who were in that freshman crew: Faulkner, now rowing No. 5 in the varsity eight; Lunt, who is rowing No. 4, and Severance, who is rowing in the Harvard eight, but neither rowed in the race.

Lunt's home is in Colorado Springs, but his family has many Boston connections, and his father was graduated from Harvard.

VAHEY LASHES HEAD OF NEW HAVEN ROAD

is whether or not the Commonwealth of Massachusetts shall permit a great and powerful corporation to disobey its laws? It is also a question of good faith.

"The President of the New Haven Railroad authorized his attorney to say last year, in a written communication, that he would do nothing toward acquiring further control of street railways in Massachusetts until after the legality of present holdings was determined. It was plain, unequivocal agreement to preserve the status quo until the Supreme Court of Massachusetts should finally pass upon the question. There was no reservation such as the president of the New Haven road made before the Committee on Railroads this year, when he said his agreement was to last only until this year's legislature had convened.

"It is a question, therefore, of good faith and respect for the law. It is a question of the people of the Commonwealth to preserve its absolute conditions, to be law-abiding citizens who respect and obey its decrees, how'er one may criticise. The arrogant, defiant and flippant exhibitions in which the president of the New Haven road decided in our very faces his absolute abandonment his agreements and his utter disregard for the law of this Commonwealth did he wish to give an example of his desire to be the State's most obedient and humble servant? Let us see what he has done:

"Real Motive Behind Deal."

"Several weeks ago there began to appear in the newspapers of this city interesting statements concerning the proposed acquisition of the Boston & Maine road. Having in mind the experience which our citizens have undergone with the Boston & Albany road through seven long years of constant inconvenience, failure on their part of a foreign corporation to keep its agreements, and a wilful violation of the provisions of the contract with the members of this Senate felt called upon in the discharge of public duty to attempt to arrest this unlawful aggression by the New Haven road.

"At first it was but a cloud upon the sky, a mere speck upon the horizon, but it began to attract the attention of the business men of the Commonwealth to what the real motive was behind the proposed acquisition. They began to inquire about, to talk to the other representatives of the Legislature and public sentiment began to crystallize against the wilful violation of the law's decrees. It was pointed out by the members of the body, who petitioned for leave to introduce a bill, that last year the Governor of this Commonwealth had seen fit to send a ringing message to the Legislature in the closing hours, commending its members for the steadfastness and loyalty to public interests which prompted the rejection of the New Haven's merger bill, but which sought to acquire control of trolley lines in Western Massachusetts.

Governor's Suggestion.

"At the hearing before the Committee on Rules I read the Governor's message of last year, and used it as the text of that meeting; still there was no relief in sight; still the Committee on Rules made no report upon our petition.

"Then a large minority of the stockholders of the Boston & Maine road began to be moved, and at a hearing before the Committee on Rules a similar request petition to ours, began to make inquiries themselves and to make their influence felt.

"Then the Governor of the Commonwealth sent a message to the Legislature, not with the ringing words of the message of last year, but with the simple suggestion that the State should recognize that a merger had been accomplished, and only seeking the protection of the interests of the Commonwealth in freights and passenger rates.

"Then came the hearing of the Committee on Railroads and the appeals upon the scene surrounded by his retinue, and when he smiled all the room was pleasant, and when he scowled and stormed, we trembled in the august presence.

"Fresh from the counting room, where he had arranged to evade the law of our Commonwealth, the Night Owl came with brazen effrontery to the hall of legislation and defiantly asserted that his road stood behind what had been done and didn't budge a bit.

"Meilen Bullied Us."

"He bullied us, he cajoled us and threatened us. He said what had been done would not be undone. He stood on his legal rights; he was advised by his counsel that he was acting within his legal rights. From the depths of his brilliant intellect came the flashes of wit which carried him beyond himself.

"The audience was very responsive. A great railroad magnate had consented to appear before an humble committee of a Massachusetts Legislature, and the high honor was appreciated, but he made the mistake that actors frequently do, he overplayed the part.

"There was a reaction when the sober-minded people of the Commonwealth began to reflect upon what this man had tried to do. They began clearly to see that what had really been done was a breach, not only his agreements with the Legislature of last year when the law would have been enacted to prevent his further acquisition in western Massachusetts and elsewhere, of trolley lines, but also to defy our present law.

"Public conscience and public spirit and the public pride and patriotism revolted at the spectacle which was here presented, and it will revolt until this legislature brings to its bar Charles S. Mellen, President of the New Haven road, and compels him to realize that violation of the law in Massachusetts will not be tolerated.

"Our Laws Defied."

"I want my position to be clear. I believe that the primary question is for the people of Massachusetts to understand and to realize that its laws have been defied. So far as the question of whether the New Haven road should acquire the control of the Boston & Maine is concerned, I state my individual judgment as to that with the light which I have at present, and the Boston & Albany road, I am opposed to the merger.

"I shall try with other gentlemen in this Senate to frame amendments to the bill that will come from the House. If we should fail in this, I propose to vote for the bill.

"I believe a partial relief is the best that it ought to be amended to provide any individual judgment as to that with the light which I have at present, and the Boston & Albany road, I am opposed to the merger.

"I believe that the question is of such paramount importance to the State that there should be a referendum.

"I believe that the New Haven road ought to be compelled to remove the stock that it has any secured in violation of the law. The constitutional question to this can be removed by giving it a reasonable time in which to return that stock.

"Provisions of the Public Statutes for limiting the right of vote to one-fourth the capital stock, and which was omitted in the modification of 1903 by the special recess committee, should be restored.

"Second, I should be most unlawful for any person to combine for the purpose of voting control, above and beyond everything else, I believe that we owe it to ourselves, to our constituents, to the Commonwealth, to succeed and maintain the majesty and supremacy of the law, to show to all men that it is not the offender, but the offense which our law recognizes, and that high station, education, brilliancy of intellect and business sagacity shall not be permitted brazenly and openly to defy the written law of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

ROCKEFELLER'S PASTOR ILL, MAY UNDERGO KNIFE

NEW YORK, June 27.—Dr. Aked, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, is lying ill at his home, No. 2 West 86th street, suffering from gall stones. His doctors hope he will be able to conduct his service on Sunday next. He preached as usual last Sunday, but suffered a great deal of pain and a physician had to be summoned.

The change of climate, combined with the hot weather of the last few days, have done much to aggravate his condition, which had become somewhat run down. His physicians say they believe that after his vacation he will be completely cured.

RICH MAN'S FARM BUILDINGS BURNED

DUBLIN, N. H., June 27.—Destroyed by fire started by a lightning bolt, the $15,000 farm buildings on the Dublin estate of Louis Cabot, a Boston millionaire, who resides at the corner of Warren and Heath streets, Roxbury, are a mass of smoking ruins to-day.

Lightning struck the barn, killing three cows, and the fire that followed destroyed the barn and farmhouse.

$100,000,000 SENT THROUGH CITY IN WAGON

NEW YORK, June 27.—One hundred million dollars in negotiable bonds were carted through the streets by the Adams Express Company.

The bonds were taken from the Forty-eighth street depot of the express company on Madison avenue to the French Steamship line pier at the foot of Morton street. The bonds will be shipped to Paris on La Savoie.

The transfer of the vast fortune was conducted with the greatest secrecy. It was the most valuable consignment ever handled by the express company.

General Agent Amador Andrews had instructed the special inspectors of the company to be at the express depot fully armed and prepared for the most important duty of their lives.

Men's $30 Two-Piece Suits at $22.50

A suit that sells on sight—made of a handsome, light gray tropical worsted, the very lightest material manufactured. The coats are cut three-button sack style and quarter lined with alpaca, and all the seams taped. The trousers are cut full with side buckles, belt straps and permanent turn-ups. A regular $30 suit, and if made at your tailor's would cost $10 more; our special price..... $22.50

Men's Two-Piece Suits in tropical weights and slightly lined, full assortments, at $15 to $25

Young Men's $12 to $15 Suits at $8.75

The last lot of these splendid suit bargains sold so quickly that we feel sure this lot will sell at once. You will agree that we picked out 100 suits in the lot for young men from 16 to 21 years of age, cut single and double-breasted sack styles. The patterns are mainly clever new fancy mixtures. These suits are made by one of the very best tailoring houses and are good value at $12 to $15; we offer them while they last at..... $8.75

Men's Fine Straw Hats

We believe in taking as much pains in selecting men's straw hats as we do in another department for women. Take two straw hats of exactly the same head size, for instance, but each with a slight difference in height of crown and width of brim, and note how differently they look when you put them on. One is the right style for you, the other is not. We have your correct style. That's why we have been so busy all the season. The two particular styles we mention for this week are,

Mackinaws at $2.00
Split Braid Sailors at $1.00 to $3.00

Men's $3 to $5 Vests at $2.15

Just 200 fancy vests in this lot. The famous Manhattan brand, well known to every good dresser. The materials have all been shrunk before cutting, and the coats are all extremely well made. The patterns are all good, mercerized stripes, plaids and several others. Regular $3 to $5 vests, while they last, at..... $2.15

MAYOR 'FEARS NOT' CHICAGO GRAFT HUNTER

Cost of $953 Per Mile to Clean Streets Being Probed by R. T. Fox.

IS HIRED BY COMMITTEE

"I am not afraid of Mr. Fox," declared Mayor Fitzgerald today when he had read an interview with the Chicago graft hunter, Richard T. Fox, who has just come to Boston, and today started on his street graft hunt, for which he will be paid $2,000 by leading citizens.

Mr. Fox, who is an expert in the science of street cleaning, makes the amazing statement that Chicago pays $207 a mile for street cleaning while the cost to Boston is $953 a mile.

"Mr. Fox's criticism does not count for anything in the minds of fair-minded citizens and does not commend himself to their favor," continued the Mayor.

"I really do not know him officially, as he has never been to my office and presented his credentials. We are ready and willing to assist him and help him in his investigation. I am not afraid of anything that may be put up for criticism by Mr. Fox.

Should Await Explanation.

"In relation to the cost of paving in his city as compared with Chicago, I will say that in Chicago the big merchants, such as Marshall Field, and to feel the influences of the streets, have to meet the cost of paving, and this, coupled with cheap labor, tends to bring the cost of paving to a low figure in that city.

"No complaint has ever come to the mayor's office under the head of this man's investigation and I feel that he should wait awhile and see the true conditions and have them explained before he makes any criticism in the matter.

Mr. Fox will make a report not only upon the condition of the streets, but upon the financial conduct of the street cleaning department. To secure his data he must secure aid from City Hall. The Mayor has stated his willingness to open the books of any department.

Contrary to general expectation, Mr. Fox will not derive any street department but merely the street cleaning department.

"My investigation of the condition of the pavements will be made only as far as it relates to the cost of cleaning them," said Mr. Fox to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter at his headquarters in the Beacon building. "The cost of cleaning is, of course, closely associated with the paving."

Asphalt Easiest Cleaned.

"What should it cost per mile to clean streets?" Mr. Fox was asked.

"The cost depends entirely upon the character of the paving," replied the expert. "Asphalt, which has many objectionable features, is the easiest to keep clean. It costs fifty per cent. more to keep a granite block pavement clean than it does asphalt.

Mr. Fox is the head of the Chicago Street Cleaning Bureau of Efficiency. This organization was formed by the Merchants and Commercial Clubs of that city several years ago. Mr. Fox, who was at that time in the New York street cleaning department, was engaged by the Chicago citizens' men to go there and make an investigation similar to one he just started in Boston.

His fee will be $2,000 for his investigation in Boston, the money being raised by a committee composed of John F. Moors, Randall G. Morris and Miss Grace W. Innis.

Brother of Novelist.

John Fox, Jr., the celebrated novelist and his brother, both belong to Kentucky. Mr. Fox graduated from the Lawrence scientific school at Harvard in 1898 as a civil engineer. When he left he first entered street work in New York in 1900. Mr. Fox was one of the many young engineers for whom Colonel Waring put to work in the street cleaning department. From being a clerk in Waring's office he rose to be foreman and inspector, and when he went to Chicago was in charge of the department of the borough of Richmond. Although he went to work under the Low administration, when the municipal ownership into power Mr. Fox was kept.

Mr. Fox believes that the public service corporations should be compelled to put the streets back into condition after tearing them up.

"The streets of Chicago are in a terrible condition as a result of the public service corporations," said Mr. Fox today.

The bureau in Chicago, of which Mr. Fox is the head, takes care of about six miles of streets in the most congested part of the business district. He has charge of the expenditure of $65,000 a year, of which half is paid by the city and half by the bureau.

Cost Depends on Traffic.

Asked as to the cost per mile of street cleaning in Chicago, Mr. Fox said:

"That is a hard question to answer. The cost depends upon the traffic. On State street, between Adams and Monroe streets, which is the most congested street in the city, a man can take care of about 2,000 yards of street a day, while in the residential district a man can take care of 12,000 yards a day."

In regard to the comparative cost of street cleaning in Boston and Chicago, he said:

"Chicago appropriates $207 per mile for street cleaning, while Boston appropriates $953 per mile."

Mr. Fox said that he had had considerable experience with wood block pavement, such as is now being installed on Washington street.

"Wood block paving, while it wears well, has the objectionable features as asphalt in regard to slipperiness," he said.

Mr. Fox would give little as to what he expected to do in Boston.

"The committee members who engaged me say that the streets are not clean, and they want to know why. I shall do my best to tell them?" said Mr. Fox.

Is City Getting Full Value?

"They also desire to know whether the city is getting full value for the money expended. To determine this I shall have to make an examination of the pay-rolls and accounts of the street cleaning department."

Mr. Fox announced his intention of going over every mile of Boston's streets and making a thorough examination of them. He believed that he would require considerable clerical assistance and that a committee stands ready to provide him with this.

Colonel Fox is accompanied to Boston by his wife and will make his home in one of the nearly seashore resorts while here.

In regard to Mayor Fitzgerald's statement that Chicago's streets were in a much worse condition than those of Boston, Mr. Fox laughingly said:

"The Mayor evidently visited the West Side, where conditions are the worst. He didn't see the streets that I have charge of. It is stated today that a bureau similar to that in Chicago will probably be the outcome of Mr. Fox's visit.

FOX---THE GRAFT HUNTER FROM CHICAGO.

Street Cleaning Expert Richard T. Fox is in Boston now, investigating the conditions which lead to such unclean streets. To-day he began an inquiry into the financial conduct of the department to learn where the money is spent.

$953 a Mile Boston's Street Cleaning Bill; Chicago's $207

QUESTIONS which Richard T. Fox, the Chicago street expert, will answer for Boston taxpayers:

Why does Boston appropriate $953 per mile for street cleaning, when it costs Chicago but $207 per mile?

Is the city given full value for the money spent on the Street Department?

Are Boston streets cleaned as well as those of New York, Chicago and other large cities?

ODD FELLOWS ELECT.

DOVER, N. H., June 27.—Prescott encampment 23, I. O. O. F., has elected the following officers: Chief patriarch, Roy C. Smith; high priest, John Cordell; senior warden, Allen Quimby; junior warden, Joseph H. Hall.

WARNING TO AUTOISTS.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., June 27.—The City Council has voted to request the police board to enforce the ordinances in regard to the speed law, as a result of the running over last week of a little girl by an auto.

SLOT MACHINE FINES.

BANGOR, Me., June 27.—Before Judge Chapman of the Municipal Court, three of the alleged owners of nickel-in-the-slot machine pleaded guilty to the charge of maintaining places for gambling.

CHASE-CHACE FAMILY HOLD BIG REUNION

Special to the Boston American.

WEST NEWBURY, June 27.—This is Chase day here and it must be set down as spelt it. The Chase-Chace Family Association began its eighth annual reunion today with several hundred members present, to which may be added members of the Bessie and other old New England families who are guests of the association. The business meeting was opened in Grange Hall at 11 o'clock with a prayer by the Rev. J. Frank Chase of Boston. Following this came an address of welcome by the Rev. Bartlett H. Weston, pastor of the Second Congregational Church of West Newbury. An address by President John C. Chase of Derry, N. H., will be followed by a bass solo by Isaac Chase of Cambridge.

"The Chase claim to English millions, the facts of the case," is the title of an address that will be delivered by Frederick H. Chase of Boston. A poem will be recited "Our Heritage," by Mrs. Anna Chase Dodge of DeKalb, Ill., will be read by the Rev. Mr. Chase, and following this will come the reading of letters from absent members of the family, reports of the officers of the association and the election of officers.

Following the meeting the annual dinner will be held.

GIRL REPUDIATES BET; WON'T WED WINNER

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 27.—Miss Helen Burrs, notwithstanding her wealth and beauty, is a "welcher." She signed an agreement before a notary public, and sealed it with a kiss, to marry Frederick Grimes if his horse, Robert G., won the Gentlemen Driving Park Derby Handicap, Park. She now declares that she will not abide by the agreement, and may be haled into court by Grimes.

The affair has been called off by George Burrs, father of the young woman.

BOLT HITS BOYS' SCHOOL.

VASSALBORO, Me., June 27.—Lightning struck the boys' end of the main dormitory of Oak Grove Seminary last night and caused $500 damage. C. E. Cunningham, the steward, was thrown thirty feet across the floor, but escaped uninjured.

AGED WOMAN DIES IN RIVER

TAUNTON, Mass., June 27.—Mrs. Eliza E. Simonds, seventy-one years of age, was found drowned in Taunton River at Richmondtown, five miles from Taunton, after being missing for a day. Mrs. Simonds has been low spirited for some time and it is believed that she ended her life voluntarily.

DUKE OF ABRUZZI ON WAY TO QUEBEC

The Duke of Abruzzi has left Boston, and his flagship, the Italian warship Varese, is now on the way to Quebec, where she will remain until August before returning to England and Italy.

AMAZING STORY OF DUAL LIFE LEADS TO DIVORCE

Boston, Winthrop and Rochester, N. Y., Society Interested by Marriage Tangle,

The amazing story of a dual life, two wives, two babies and two names, told in the divorce court by Mrs. Jeanne Reimarer Warren in her suit against Franklin Herrick Warren, is today an absorbing topic of interest to Boston and Winthrop people, as well as residents of Rochester, N. Y., whence comes the plaintiff, lawyers and witness in the remarkable case.

Mrs. Warren sought relief for divorce before Judge Bischoff in the special term of the Supreme Court of New York, known as the "Wednesday divorce mattinee," where only undefended cases are heard. She named as co-respondent a Miss Ethel Gillis of Winthrop, who in Court entered the defendant under the name of Hager, his Massachusetts name. Two children are the result of this second marital venture of Warren, or Hager. Miss Gillis is a sister-in-law of Walter Clarkson, the Harvard baseball player.

Mrs. Hager welcomes the suit, for, when the divorce is granted, she can remarry Warren, or Hager. The fact that the suit could be adjusted with less publicity, undoubtedly, determined Mrs. Warren to seek divorce in New York. Consent had been expressed that she might have appealed to the Massachusetts courts, and that here a suit for bigamy might be the result after the very unusual facts became known.

Warren, according to witnesses, married Miss Reimarer two years ago. They went West, and he soon deserted her. At that time he was traveling salesman for a typewriter company. Then he came to Boston, where, under the name of Hager, two witnesses said he married Miss Gillis of Winthrop.

Judge Bischoff has taken the case under advisement. Meanwhile society in Rochester and Winthrop is wondering what will be the upshot of one of the strangest marriage tangles on record.

HOT WEATHER MILK STATIONS SAVE INFANTS

REGULATED BY PHYSICIANS

That the infants of Boston and Cambridge may be supplied with the purest of milk during the hot weather, the different stations of these cities are now opened to the public during the months of June, July, August and September.

In Boston the milk can be obtained at cost from the following hospitals and dispensaries in the city: Children's Hospital, Infants' Hospital, Boston Dispensary, Out-Dispensary, Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston City Hospital, Tremont Dispensary, Mount Sinai Hospital, and the private physicians' emergency store that is allotted to different physicians in the quarterly settled district of Boston.

In this city the milk is obtained on prescription of the attending physician and the overseeing of the matter is in the hands of Maynard Ladd, M. D., who is the medical supervisor for the milk fund and which is for the use of sick poor infants of Boston during the hot weather.

Last year there were 1,200 prescriptions for the milk filled.

In Cambridge the milk is supplied by the city, through the Board of Health, and the work of distribution is in charge of Dr. D. Albert Norris, M. D. The milk is prepared at the laboratories of the Cedar Hill Farm at Waltham and is distributed at cost at the following points of distribution:

Cambridge School for Nurses, 1000 Massachusetts avenue; Margaret Fuller House, 32 Ellery street; Cobble Hill Shelter and Bridge Field Shelter, Bridge's; Cambridge Hospital, Harvard Square; Cambridge Hospital, Cambridgeport; Cambridge Hospital, Tremont street, Cambridgeport; Cambridge Hospital, Prospect street; Cambridge Hospital, Cambridge Highlands; Cambridge Hospital, Cambridge Highlands; Cambridge Hospital, Cambridge Highlands

SNAPSHOT MAN PROUD OF THE ROXBURY TEN

He Found Many Watching for Him in That District, Which He Toured Yesterday.

TEN DOLLARS TO THE LUCKY

In next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN will be found the Snapshot Man's "Roxbury Ten." If you were with his camera and can identify your picture in next Sunday's group, the Snapshot Man has Ten Dollars for you.

There are lots of people in Roxbury. It spreads over much territory, and the Snapshot Man does not pretend to say that he was in all parts of that district. But he did go to the main busy corners and spots where he found not a few keeping close watch for him, mindful of the fact that it means one of the weekly Ten Dollar prizes to be caught by his camera.

The Somerville Ten was a good looking group, so the Snapshot Man has been told. He believes that the Roxbury Ten will be found to be equally so.

Only one in the Somerville Ten remained unidentified. A Negro boy, apparently a little boy, and a fine looking lad, judging by his picture. Any other than the boy may have another chance to secure the $10, which the Snapshot Man has for him, the BOSTON AMERICAN promises the picture again to-day. Does anyone know this Somerville boy?

Once more the Snapshot Man waits to say a word to some of the Cambridge Ten. He has ten dollars for the person who is properly identified. There is one man in the Cambridge Ten, the editor gently knows that he is the right one, but who is either too bashful coming in and claiming one of the ten-dollar prizes. The Snapshot Man gently urges that this money is only too glad to turn it over to the right one. He is loath to believe that he ought to go out and hunt them up.

However, the Somerville Ten came after their prizes, and the Roxbury Ten will be published in next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN, together with the new group of the Roxbury Ten.

TWIN BRIDES DRESS ALIKE; PUZZLE GROOMS

Pretty Whitman Girls Enjoy Confusion of Prospective Husbands and Guests.

WHITMAN, June 27.—Because of the remarkable resemblance of the twin brides at a double wedding yesterday, the likeness being further accentuated by the sisters dressing in similar costumes and arranging their hair in the same style, embarrassment resulted to both of the grooms, who for a few minutes seemed unable to tell which was which, much to the amusement of the girls, while the guests at the ceremony and following reception were entirely at sea as to the particular identity of the two pretty girls who chose to marry at the same time.

The weddings were those of Miss Jennie G. Crowley to Francis F. Casey, and her twin sister, Katherine V. Crowley, to Albert G. Kelly. The twins are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Crowley of No. 323 Auburn street, parents of a family of ten children.

The ceremony was performed at the Holy Ghost Church with a nuptial high mass celebrated by Rev. Father J. F. Hamilton, assisted by Rev. Father J. J. O'Donnell and Rev. Father E. P. Murphy.

Even at the church the guests were confused, and friends of Miss Katherine were quizzing her sister to questioners, while the same was happening among the friends of Miss Jennie.

The girls met their sweethearts about the same time. Both kept their secrets of approaching marriage from each other, but informed their parents, who finally decided to have the wedding performed together, great was the surprise expressed by the girls when each was told of the other's betrothal. They thought it a fitting end to have the ceremony and husband's enthused over the plan.

At the reception Mr. Kelly's friends and relatives were discussing the future with Mr. Casey's friends, at which times were forced to offer explanations throughout the entire day.

ABSTAINERS PLAN FALL FETE.

What promises to be the biggest celebration held under the direction of the Springfield Catholic Total Abstinence Union will occur in Worcester on Monday, September 2, when 3,000 Catholic abstainers, augmented by neighboring diocesan branches of the National Catholic Total Abstinence Union, will swell an Boston societies, making in all 7,000 men, will parade through the principal streets of the city. Women's societies will ride in carriages.

It is expected that President Roosevelt will be present and will review the participants at the field day exercises to be held in the afternoon at Agricultural Park. Governor Guild will also be present, as well as dignitaries of the Catholic Church.

WORCESTER MAN SUICIDE?

A letter which has been received by Mrs. Lulu Hutchinson of Newtonville, written her by her husband who disappeared from his home, was to-day forwarded to the Lowell police and tends to clear up the identity of the unknown man that was found in the water at Pawtucket Falls in the Merrimac River last Monday.

The letter which was received by Mrs. Hutchinson read: "I am sick, tired, and hungry and no one will hire me. I am going to end life slowly. I will turn on the gas and if this fails I will jump into the river."

Mrs. Hutchinson is on her way to Lowell to determine whether the body is that of her missing husband.

AGED 70 YEARS, HELD AS ROBBER

Accused of stealing a watch and $2.40 in money from a Woburn man, Richard C. Williams, who is seventy years old, appears in police court to-day. He is the oldest man ever held at the Joy Street Police Station on such a charge.

Williams, who lives at No. 112½ Stanford street, is charged with robbing Joseph J. McGuire of No. 11 Buckland street, Woburn.

The police arrested Charles G. Roberts of East Carver and Thomas Mahoney of Charlestown as accomplices.

PHILANTHROPIST RIS TO MARRY HIS STENOGRAPHER

IPSWICH GIRL TO BE BRIDE OF FAMED AUTHOR

Miss May Phillips Has Been His Assistant in Charity Work of East Side.

A REMARKABLE ROMANCE

Jacob A. Riis, New York, author, philanthropist and sociologist, today at Ipswich confirmed the report that he is to marry in August Miss Mary Phillips of that place, who for two years has been his constant companion and helper in his work in the slums of New York.

At the same time it was announced that Miss Caroline Phillips, a sister of the future Mrs. Riis, will be married in September to Ernest Everett Smith of Boston, who was for four years on the Harvard crew, and who is now with the local brokerage firm of Perry, Coffin and Burr of State street.

Mr. Riis' engagement comes after a remarkable courtship.

Miss Phillips is but twenty-five years of age, less than half as old as the man who wooed and won her during their long labors in the slums of New York. She is the daughter of Mrs. H. Phillips, formerly of St. Louis, and now living in this city, and although her life during the past few years as assistant to Mr. Riis has been a very busy one, she is well acquainted in social circles of this city.

First Marriage Ideal.

The romance of Mr. Riis and Miss Phillips is an unusual one—but then the whole life has been a romance. His first marriage was deeply happy and when his wife died two years ago messages of condolence came to him from all over the world, for his reputation as author and as a man was international. But two years before that sad event he had, in his autobiography paid to his wife one of the most beautiful tributes ever penned. After this bereavement he moved from his home on Richmond Hill to the home of friends on Long Island. He spent most of his time in his office in the Neighborhood Settlement in the poorest quarter of New York that by continually facing his life task of ameliorating the condition of the poor he might assuage the terrible grief that assailed him. Here his stenographer and helper came to him every day, and together they worked over their books and reports, or side by side delved into the squalor and misery of the tenement world, bringing with them comfort and cheer.

Side by Side in Slums.

Who shall say when their keen sympathy first found him something deeper and more romantic? From time to time reports have been spread of the engagement of the earnest veteran worker and his fair young assistant only to be denied first with annoyance but gradually with less and less insistence. The positive announcement is now made by friends.

Mr. Riis is averse to publicity in connection with his forthcoming marriage, which will probably take place here in August, and every effort, it is said, will be made to withhold the details until after the ceremony.

The story of Riis's life reads like a romance. Born in Denmark some fifty years ago, he came to this country a poor boy. After many adventures and much privation he became a reporter on a New York city newspaper. He was attached to police headquarters and his work there brought him into touch with all that was criminal and all that was noble in the big city.

Began Work as Reporter.

In spite of his arduous work as a reporter whose "stories" were beautiful in their directness of treatment and fidelity to truth, he found time to investigate for himself many phases of city life that were overlooked by officials and the average reformer.

He established the tenement house life earnestly and his quick mind soon worked out practical relief. One of the results of these observations was his book "How the Other Half Lives," a work that created a sensation not only in New York but all over the world. It raised universal sympathy for the unfortunates of the slums and opened up a new field for activity on the part of philanthropists, which Mr. Riis promptly informed the surface of that world into which Riis had plunged deeply.

It was a fortunate day for Riis when Theodore Roosevelt was appointed police commissioner of New York. He encountered the reporter found an attentive listener to the story of the evening's adventures and he had discovered and an enthusiastic fellow-worker in the plans for remedy.

Roosevelt Encouraged Him.

He encouraged the reporter in his mission of cleanliness in the tenements and soon Riis had a powerful following that helped him toward success in his efforts for the welfare of the poor. The slumming trips of the reporter and the former President of the United States led directly and indirectly to many reforms and Mr. Riis now has a world-wide fame as a practical philanthropist.

His marriage will not swerve him from his life work. During his past years of practical work Miss Phillips has been his constant companion and helper and she too has made the poor of New York her life wards.

Riis's Tribute to First Wife in "Making of an American"

"I DREAMED a beautiful dream in my youth, and I awoke and found it true. My Silver Bride they called her just now (1901). The frost is upon my head, indeed; her's Winter has not touched with its softest breath. Her footfall the lightest, her laugh the merriest in the house. The boys are all in love with their mother; the girls get and nursing her together. The cadet corps elect her an honorary member, for no stouter champion of the flag is in the land.

"Sometimes when she sings with the children I sit and listen, and with her voice there comes to me as an echo of the long past the words in her letter, that blessed letter in which she wrote down the text of all my after life: 'We will strive together for all that is noble and good.' So she saw her duty as a true American, and ever she has kept the pledge."

He tells of her first attempt at cooking delightfully—a chicken that she spoiled.

"But our supper of bread and cheese that night was fit for a King. My mother, who was a notable cook, never made quite as good. Who cares, anyhow? Have mothers curls or tyrannize and scrimp her together. The cadet corps elect her an honorary member, for no stouter champion of the flag is in the land.

"Sometimes when she sings with the children I sit and listen, and with her voice there comes to me as an echo of the long past the words in her letter, that blessed letter in which she wrote down the text of all

BOYNTON PLANS TRIAL FOR HIS BICYCLE ROAD

Mono-Rail Line Between Boston and Fall River Will Be Life Saver.

GREAT SPEED PROMISED

E. Moody Boynton to-day gives his plans for the Boston, Quincy & Fall River Bicycle Railway, the building of which has at last been authorized by law.

This is what Mr. Boynton hopes to accomplish:

By E. Moody Boynton.

"The Boston, Quincy & Fall River Bicycle Railway bill has just been signed by the Governor and is now a law. This, we hope, is the last chapter in the legislative struggle to prevent the general use of what machinery claim will prevent the annual killing and wounding of about 100,000 people.

The Boynton cycle railroad operates on the single standard gauge rail and cannot upset the rail. The steel rail sixteen feet above not only drives the train electrically, but renders derailment impossible.

It is half-inward on curves tilting the train like a bicycle, rounding sharp curves without strain. In 1,000,000 experiments no accident has ever occurred, nor was any change of the standard gauge required.

The new railroad will for a time double the demand for steel and copper. It will give us for the water power of the mountains and the waste coal of the mines and will change the existing two rail supported cars, each of whom weigh more than the entire motive car of greatest density, and one-fourth the weight, so grooved that the train becomes an instrument of precision, that without vibration can cross the continent in twenty-four hours. The train all ready made upon the. The gyrostatic action of the wheels is only the well known principle which makes the child's hoop to stand erect. The electric wheels are the simplest form of power applied, usually about one hundred horse-power in the wheel.

The multipolar armatures are within the steel tire like the figure on the face of a watch with the field magnets on the entire plunge of the rail, the perforated plates cover each side of the wheel and strengthen the tire support.

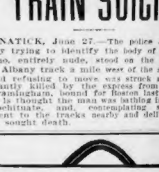
TUG'S SHAFT BROKEN.

In a crippled condition, the Commercial Towboat Company's ocean going tug Phillip Prior, owned in this city, was picked up and towed into New York by the Joshua Lovett, another of the company's boats, with a broken shaft.

NAKED MAN A TRAIN SUICIDE

NATICK, June 27.—The police are to-day trying to identify the body of a man who, entirely nude, stood on the Boston & Albany track a mile west of the station, and refusing to move was struck and instantly killed by the express from South Framingham, bound for Boston last night. It is thought the man was bathing in Lake Cochituate, and contemplating suicide, went to the tracks nearby and deliberately sought death.

Best Results In Starching



Duryeas' Gloss Starch enables you to do better work in less time, with less wear and tear on the garments, than any other starch. It keeps linen bright, new, beautiful—is always uniform in quality, always perfect in its results.

DURYEAS' GLOSS STARCH

is made by a process that insures absolute purity and does not have the slightest ill-effect upon any fabric or color. It imparts a firm, pliable, white-as-snow finish, but is without that harsh, brilliant lustre so offensive to good taste.

At all grocers, in full-weight packages.

BEST FOR ALL KINDS OF STARCHING — for general use, boil as directed. For light starching, unequaled as a cold-water starch, requires no boiling.

BELIEVE LOVING JURY WILL GIVE JUDGE FREEDOM

Prosecution in Virginia Trial Seeks to Prove Girl's Story False.

PLEAD "UNWRITTEN LAW"

Special to the Boston American.

HOUSTON, Va., June 27.—Beautiful Elizabeth Loving's second ordeal came today when the prosecution started out to prove that the remarkable sacrifice she made of her honor to save her father from the death penalty was based on falsehood. Through Miss Loving's closest girl chum, Miss Kidd, the State said it would prove that she had not been attacked by Theodore I. Estes, the young man her father shot down, but that she was simply intoxicated by her drink of liquor and had confided that such was the case to Miss Kidd.

Look for Acquittal.

Miss Loving went to the Kidd home after the carriage drive and there explained to her chum that the one drink had been too much for her and went to bed. Had Estes attacked her she would, according to the theory of the prosecution, she would have wept and told her closest friend, to whose home she went in preference to her own house.

It is generally believed in this county that Judge Loving will be acquitted regardless of the evidence on the "unwritten law." Whether his daughter was attacked or not is of little matter. He believed she had been and that is his excuse.

Despite this popular feeling, the trial, which is called now the "Virginia Thaw case, owing to the similarity of Evelyn's confession to the story of Miss Loving and in the avengers acts, must go on to its end. It is felt that the jury's verdict is a foregone conclusion. Judge Barksdale to-day prepared to deliver his decision as to the admissibility of testimony offered by the prosecution in a determined attempt to impeach the truthfulness of Miss Loving's story on the witness stand.

The same question has arisen here as in the trial of Harry K. Thaw. The prosecution, like the New York District Attorney with the story of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, is bent upon showing the testimony of Miss Loving to be false. And the defense has made the same point as was made by the defence in New York—that a story cannot be assailed, since it does not matter whether the story be true or false, only that it was enough to have moved Judge Loving to kill Estes, and justifiably to have killed him.

The prosecution showed the stand it meant to take when both sides had rested their case in chief and the case in rebuttal was begun. The first move made by the prosecution was to call Miss Annie Kidd of Lovingston as the first witness stand. She is the friend of Miss Elizabeth Loving with whom the judge's daughter stopped on the day she took the fateful drive with young Estes.

Like Delmas's Argument.

The first question put to Miss Kidd was intended to bring out that the story Miss Loving had told when she returned from the drive with Estes differed radically from the story she told her father, and corroborated as having been told by Judge Loving in his own testimony.

The defence immediately objected to this line of questioning. Practically the same argument was put forth as was brought out by Joseph M. Dubuar at the trial of Harry Thaw. It was claimed that it was altogether immaterial whether or not the story of Miss Loving was true. The argument was warm and the objection was finally turned over to Judge Barksdale for his decision.

Should the Thaw trial had modelled the tactics of the defence. For, not depending altogether on the "unwritten law," under the "unwritten law," force was also put forth the claim that Loving was mentally incompetent when he shot Estes; that he was a hard drinker and had suffered from delirium tremens, and that in the state of mind superinduced by the alcoholic excesses the story told him by his daughter drove him insane.

ATTACKS GIRL'S STORY.

No intimation in the shift of tactics was given until former Judge Loving's lawyers called to the stand Dr. Emmons, a brain specialist from Washington. Dr. Emmons was brought here and paid a large fee expressly to impress the jury with testimony alleging the defendant's insanity.

Questioned along the line that excessive use of liquor might have unsettled Judge Loving's brain, Dr. Emmons swore that from twenty to fifty per cent. of mental troubles arose from this cause.

The prosecution is prepared to disprove Miss Loving's statement as to what happened in the buggy ride by at least a score of witnesses.

DOZEN WITNESSES NEAR.

Daniel Harmon, of counsel for the prosecution, in his argument to admit the impeaching evidence, said:

"We propose to deny entirely the correctness of statements made by Miss Loving. We propose to show that she was merely intoxicated; that she was not unconscious; that she was not drugged; that she did not get back to Lovingston at a late hour at night; that she took this ride in the daylight; that she got out of the buggy practically without assistance. She had a conversation later with Miss Kidd, and told Miss Kidd that all that was the matter was that she had taken too large a drink and become intoxicated.

"Further, we expect to show that in the progress of the ride it was broad daylight, in sight of the village of Lovingston and within 100 yards of a house on the public road, and at the very point where were three witnesses in whose full view she was before reaching that little wood road and passing by it, and that during the whole of that ride for a distance of several miles there were a woman and man in a buggy behind her, who travelled the whole distance, saw them turn around at the end of the drive and start back to the course of this drive she was met by a dozen witnesses, and spoke to one of them and called him by his name, after the time that she said she became unconscious.

"The witness is present to whom young Estes gave what was left of the whisky in the bottle, and he drank it without bad effect.

Mr. Harmon further said Loving was in the village of Lovingston before he did the shooting; that he knew that Mr. Kidd's family was living in sight of the spot where he got out of his buggy, and that they could inform him of the time of his daughter's return, and of her condition. The doctor who was called upon to see her was living in the village; that his kinsman, Mr. Lee, who had sent him word about the facts, was living in the village, and, although he was in Lee's store, he did not inquire where he was, nor did he undertake to see the doctor or the Kidds, or otherwise to get any information whatever about the facts from any one.

CLASH WITH ALIENIST.

With the emotional insanity plea which the defence has introduced came the inevitable alienists and the usual hypothetical questions, pages long and unintelligible.

Dr. Emmons admitted offhand that he was an expert and answered all the questions put to him by the counsel for the defence glibly. When the commonwealth's attorney, Mr. Bouldin, began his cross-examination, Dr. Emmons and he had a warm time parrying each other's thrusts.

Dr. Emmons did not want to answer Mr. Bouldin's questions and sidestepped them until he had tired the prosecutor out. He diagnosed Judge Loving's insanity as alcoholic insanity, because his lips twitched and the arteries in the retina of his eyes were red and tortuous.

"So, you believe a man with red eyes is insane?" suggested Mr. Bouldin.

"Not at all," the witness answered, "I should say a man with red eyes was drunk."

Mr. Bouldin wanted the witness to say whether or not he believed Judge Loving was insane when he was judge of the county court of Nelson county.

"I've never been a county judge," the witness said, "but a man having some mental defects might conduct a county court."

Everybody laughed, including Judge Barksdale, and then the witness tried to explain by saying he always excepted present company.

The defence then rested.

TOLD TRAGIC LIFE STORIES TO SAVE TWO MEN.

No more pathetic court recitals have been recorded in recent years than that by Elizabeth Loving, whose picture is shown on the left, with that of Evelyn Thaw, whose stories are dramatically similar. The sacrifice of one at the bar of justice is to save her father who slew the young man who he believed had cruelly wronged his daughter. The other defended the slayer of Architect White in the famous Madison Garden tragedy.

MRS. MICAH DYER DIES SUDDENLY

Mrs. Micah Dyer, one of the most prominent clubwomen in the United States, founder of the Woman's Charity Club of Boston, and equally prominent in social circles of New England, died suddenly early to-day of heart disease, at her home, No. 555 Columbia road, Dorchester. She was seventy-eight years old.

The news of her death spread quickly, and numerous other large circle of friends was received with sincere grief. Stricken early in the morning, Mrs. Dyer lapsed into unconsciousness. Medical aid was quickly summoned, but death came quickly.

The name of Mrs. Micah Dyer has been associated with practically every large philanthropic work started in Boston for over forty years. She served on the board of directors of the Home for Aged Couples, the Moral Education Society, the National Prison Association, the Benedt Society for the University Education of Women and the Helping Hand Society. She was also president in 1904 of two long-established clubs, the Wintergreens and the Women's Charity Club.

In organizing the Woman's Charity Club of Boston nineteen years ago, Mrs. Dyer left a memorial that time will never efface. Starting with a capital of 40 cents, the club now has a magnificent hospital on the corner of Parker Hill avenue, Roxbury, and is entirely paid for and free of all debt. Many of the most prominent society women in Boston attended the opening of the hospital.

At all state receptions and social events Mrs. Dyer was always an invited guest. On her birthdays the noted philanthropist was given receptions by her loving associates.

Mrs. Dyer was a member of thirty-seven clubs.

ROOSEVELT CAMPAIGN FUND PROBE DEMANDED

New York Republican Senators Sidetrack Plan for Proposed Investigation.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 27.—Were it not for an objection by Senator John Raines, the Republican boss of the upper house, the resolution asking for a probe of the Roosevelt campaign fund would have been adopted before the Senate adjourned for the session yesterday afternoon. The resolution was offered by Senator Thompson of Kings County, a Democrat, and created a great surprise. It is as follows:

"Whereas, Recent published reports, obviously inspired by the promoters of corporate interests doing business in this State, have charged that the managers of the National Republican campaign of 1904 solicited and accepted large contributions of money from said corporate interests in accordance with an understanding that President Roosevelt and the National Government would grant certain concessions intended to benefit said corporate interests; and

Duty of Legislature.

"Whereas, Such reports having been circulated for the sole purpose of establishing in the public mind the existence of such understanding between President Roosevelt and the corporations, it is the duty of the Legislature to investigate and prove the truth or falsity of such public reports in the interest of the public morals; it is therefore

"Resolved, That within five days from the adoption of this resolution in the Legislature, there shall be appointed in the manner hereinafter provided, nine persons whose duty it shall be to inquire into and investigate the origin and truth or falsity of such reports with a view of fixing the responsibility for the same. Four of the nine persons shall be appointed by the Governor, two shall be appointed by the President of the Senate from the Senate, and three by the Speaker of the Assembly from the Assembly. The members of such commission shall receive no compensation for their services, except that they shall be entitled to their actual and necessary expenses incurred in the performance of their duties under the provisions of this act, to be paid by the Treasurer on the audit and warrant of the Comptroller; and it is further

"Resolved, that such committee is hereby authorized and empowered to require and enforce the attendance of witnesses and the production of books and papers and to administer oaths and to employ counsel, stenographers, clerks and such other employes as may be necessary for the investigation, the result of which shall be submitted at the next session of the Legislature; and the sum of $25,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of any moneys in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be paid by the State Treasurer on the audit and warrant of the Comptroller to carry out the purpose of this resolution."

The forty-eight Senators present sat up with unusual interest as the purpose of the resolution, which was offered without explanation, was revealed by the reading of it by the clerk.

Grandfather's Cure for Constipation

GREAT medicine,—the Sawbuck. Two hours a day sawing wood will keep anyone's Bowels regular.

No need of pills, Cathartics, Castor Oil, nor "Physics," if you'll only work the Sawbuck regularly.

• • •

Exercise is Nature's Cure for Constipation and,—a Ten-Mile walk will do, if you haven't got a wood-pile.

But, if you will take your Exercise in an Easy Chair, there's only one way to do that, because,—there's only one kind of Artificial Exercise for the Bowels and its name is CASCARETS.

Cascarets are the only means to exercise the Bowel Muscles without work.

• • •

They don't Purge, Gripe, nor "upset your Stomach," because they don't act like "Physics."

They don't flush out your Bowels and Intestines with a costly waste of Digestive Juice, as Salts, Castor Oil, Calomel, Jalap, or Agarter Waters always do.

No—Cascarets strengthen and stimulate the Bowel Muscles, that line the Food passages and that tighten up when food touches them, thus driving the food to its finish.

A Cascaret acts on your Bowel Muscles as if you had just sawed a cord of wood, or walked ten miles.

Cascarets move the Food Naturally, digesting it without waste of tomorrow's Gastric Juice.

WHITNEY, AT SALEM, DODGES THE MERGER

Sidesteps Railroad Consolidation and Makes Reciprocity Main Issue in Speech.

GUILD AND LODGE RAPPED

Henry M. Whitney, candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, who last night addressed a Salem audience on Canadian reciprocity, is to speak on the same topic at Cyprus Hall, No. 40 Prospect street, Cambridge, at 8 o'clock tonight. The meeting will also be addressed by the Hon. Charles S. Hamlin. John H. Corcoran will preside.

Salem did not go wildly enthusiastic last evening over Mr. Whitney's no-merger platform, and not only Mr. Whitney, but former Congressman John A. Sullivan, who accompanied him, sidestepped almost all mention of the merger. Enthusiasm was only apparent in spots, but the committee said that the weather and opposition attractions, including a jollification by the Knights of Columbus, were responsible.

Henry Cabot Lodge and Governor Guild came in for several raps while both speakers hurled vernal hot shot at the trusts.

Reciprocity was practically the only subject touched upon. On the merger question Mr. Whitney said briefly that, by consolidation, the railroads were responsible for much of the past prosperity of the State.

"It is marvellous to me," said Mr. Whitney, "that in spite of adverse conditions, the Massachusetts merchants has held his market as well, and that he has done so is owing to the liberal policies of the railroads, made possible by wholesale mergers. Except for the various consolidations of railroads from here to California it would have been impossible for rates to have been kept on a basis that has permitted us to hold our markets."

Prosperity Now at Height.

He emphasized the fact that in his opinion the prosperity of the State had reached its height and, unless help was given in the shape of tariff reform, there were hard times ahead for Massachusetts.

A banquet, reception, parade and lawn party were on the programme for Mr. Whitney's party and everything was carried out according to schedule, under the direction of John H. Sheehy, ex-Chairman of the Salem Ward and City Committee, except the lawn party, which had to be postponed on account of rain. An audience of 200 was present in Assembly Hall for the speechmaking.

Accompanying Mr. Whitney were F. F. Tripp and George T. Morgan. They were met at the depot by Mr. Sheehy and F. M. Coakley, chairman of the Salem Democratic Ward and City Committee. Mr. Whitney and the committee were driven to the Essex House, where the usual politicians of both parties were on hand to greet Mr. Whitney, together with a dozen or fifteen business men. After a reception, the banquet was announced. Just thirty sat down to the table. At the feast was a majority of the Democratic Ward and City Committee, including the chairman, Coakley, and a sprinkling of Republicans. Alfred D. Burnham presided. There were no speeches.

After the dinner many of the crowd availed themselves of the opportunity to meet Mr. Whitney personally. The speakers were escorted to the hall by about fifty of the rank and file, headed by the band.

Mr. Whitney said in part:

What Fields' Bay State Markets.

"Social life is dependent on industrial life. Communities like ours are dependent on communities at a distance for markets. In this State only about one in twenty is engaged in agricultural pursuits, and the question for us is 'How can our markets for Massachusetts mechanics be best preserved and extended?' In the great wheat fields beyond the Mississippi, 1,500 miles away, that have kept the wheels of industry merrily humming for fifty years.

"Except for the wise policy of the railroads, the merchants of Massachusetts would have found it exceedingly difficult to keep their markets.

"I don't know why Canada, that is near to us, should not increase in population in the next fifty years like the West. Boston is the natural port of that territory. If there is not reciprocity it will be most disastrous for Massachusetts industries.

"Massachusetts Senators are chiefly to blame. The people must have a mandate. This is what we want.

"The Senior Senator knows if the people declare they want it it will be a censure of his conduct for the past fifteen years. He will fight against it.

"If the people once take down the wall there will be so much prosperity that it will open their eyes to the iniquity of the whole tariff."

At the conclusion of the speech, ex-Representative Henry Hobbs, of Wenham, who recently celebrated his eighty-fifth birthday, proposed three cheers for Mr. Whitney, leading the cheering himself.

MAYOR BLOCKS VOTE RECOUNT

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 27.—George B. McClellan yesterday resumed his desperate fight to retain his title as "Mayor" of this city and prevent an honest count of the votes cast in 1903, by obtaining a writ of prohibition from Almet F. Jenks, presiding Justice of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, second department, in Brooklyn.

This writ forbids Justice Samuel T. Maddox from taking action on the application of William Randolph Hearst for a recount of the ballots in the special term of the Supreme Court in Kings County at the Brooklyn Hall of Justice. It commands all Judges of the Supreme Court in the second department, Mr. Hearst and Clarence J. Shearn, his counsel, not to proceed in the case.

Justice Jenks made the writ returnable before the Appellate Division in Brooklyn at 2 o'clock this morning. Its formal argument on the constitutionality of the recent law, but passed by the Legislature, will be heard.

DREAM REVEALS MISSING BOY

LUDINGTON, Mich., June 27.—The body of five-year-old Ace Davis, son of Maurice Davis, who mysteriously disappeared in June, was discovered in a sand bank as the result of a dream. Mrs. William Hall and Mrs. A. Brewster, who live near the sand pile, dreamed of seeing the little boy in the sand on the night after his disappearance and finally induced a search to be made, which resulted in the discovery of the body.

Here Is the Champion Absent-Minded Senator

George A. Garfield, who pocketed report on taxing express companies.

This is Senator George H. Garfield of Brockton, the man who was accused in the Massachusetts House of Representatives on Tuesday of carrying in his pocket for a whole month a bill providing for the taxation of express companies. Garfield is a member of the Committee on Taxation. His committee had voted to report that the Express Company Bill "ought to pass." Garfield was entrusted with the report.

The bill was reported so late that a "joint rule" was raised against it, a useful little rule which says that all bills must be reported seasonably. In this extremity "the next General Court" (that is, the next Legislature) was decided upon in the Senate as about the best place for the bill. The House refused to be duped. It has substituted the bill for the "next Legislature" recommendation.

Why, in your opinion, did George H. Garfield of Brockton carry the Express Company Bill around with him for so long a time, as some of his fellow committeemen allege?

Did you notice, a while back, that the Adams Express Company recently distributed $24,000,000 in extra dividends, made on the railroads? This operation is known in brokers' offices as "cutting a melon." Can there be any connection between holding up taxation bills in State Legislatures and cutting $24,000,000 melons?

Mr. Garfield explains that it was an "oversight."

Perhaps Mr. Garfield is more to be pitied than censured. Perhaps his memory is not all that it should be. It will be recalled that when the Senate was deliberating on the scheme to sidetrack labor legislation for the present year, by sending all labor bills to a "recess" committee, the Brockton Central Labor Union urged Mr. Garfield to vote against the "Recess" bill. He didn't do so. Perhaps he forgot.

'WHITE WINGS' STRIKE BLOCKS CITY STREETS

Menace to Health and Property. New Yorkers Appeal in Vain to Health Bureau.

THE "BREAKERS" BEATEN

NEW YORK, June 27.—New York's "White Wings" are still on strike. Garbage in the streets, and especially in the crowded tenement districts, is piling up with alarming rapidity. Many citizens have appealed to the health department to take action, but with the labor tie-up on their hands the department officials are able to do but little.

On some of the streets the piles of rubbish are so high and numerous that wagons can hardly pass, and the odor of decayed animal and vegetable matter is almost unbearable. An added menace to the safety of citizens is the fire in fresh ash heaps. In many places there are blazes of considerable proportion along the side walks, threatening the tenements and the lives of children in the street. The strike is extending and more than half of the city is affected.

The men's principal grievances are that they are compelled to work more than eight hours a day and are unjustly fined for trivial offences. The strikers say they do not intend to let others take their places pending settlement. In several instances strike breakers have been pulled from their wagons and beaten.

Miss Madia Stowe, only daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William H. Stowe of Melrose, became the bride of Samuel Hayward, a newspaper man of that city, at the home of her parents, No. 22 Howard street, last evening. Because of the illness of the bride's mother only immediate relatives and close friends were present. The ceremony took place at 7:30 o'clock, and was performed by Rev. Thomas Sims, D. John D.'s Brother Sees "Better Times," Despite Standard Oil Inquisition.

PREDICTS NO REACTION

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 27.—William Rockefeller sees better times ahead, despite the inquisition against the Standard Oil, which began in Chicago yesterday. In a formal statement issued to the tickers in Wall street today, Mr. Rockefeller says:

"I think the situation which has prevailed for several months past is wearing itself out very rapidly and that the prospects for the future are good.

"I see no signs of a general reaction in business. Some of the managers in others may have a little setback in business, but it should not be important.

"Concerning the railroads, their earnings continue to make astonishing gains. However, it would be a great deal better for them if their business were running 10 per cent to 15 per cent lower. In that case there would be more profit for the railroads. There is more business than can be handled economically.

"For one concrete illustration—and there are doubtless many others like it—the New York Central recently had 7,000 loaded freight cars on its line which it was unable to move because its facilities were overtaxed. Such situations make economical operation impossible."

HUNDREDS WATCH WEDDING ON LAWN

Amid the glow of Japanese lanterns, Miss Mary O'Brien of Medford was last night married to Mark Gallagher. The wedding took place on the lawn of the bride's parents, and was a brilliant event. There were over 200 in attendance.

FREE FUN AT 5 BIG PARKS WITH COUPONS

Thousands of American Readers Enjoy Shady Groves and Cool Sea Breezes.

SPORT FOR LITTLE ONES

How about Revere Beach for a beauty show? Where can you go to see so many handsome, well-dressed young ladies and with dashing escorts as there?

This thought was voiced by a party of visitors from a distant city, who took in the parks during a week's visit to Boston. They explained that they encountered the genuine flower of youth on the avenue and the boulevard.

When one remembers that these are for the most part hard working young people with good homes, out for innocent recreation, he is glad that such a beauty spot exists as the Massachusetts State Reservation, with its many attractions.

The BOSTON AMERICAN publishes a combination coupon every Sunday entitling holders to visit at half price nearly a dozen amusement places on Revere Beach, a saving of sixty cents. For next Sunday they are: Thompson's Coasting, Crescent Gardens Theater, Bellaway Rink, Automobile Race, Mystic Hill, Musical Hall way, Roller Coaster, Grand Muse, Rough Rider Hippodrome, Old Mines, Merry-Go-Round and Hurley's Hurdles.

CHILDREN ENJOY LEXINGTON PARK'S BIG MENAGERIE

"Give me Lexington Park for a day of serene enjoyment," said a family man returning from a day off. "but there you can loll in the shade of the trees, you can get away from the din; read; walk in the cool paths, unhampered by crowds; because the grove is so broad and deep; swing, spread yourself over the rustic seats, sleep if you like in the cool breeze, or if you want things to stir you, seek those places in the park where the wheels are cracking and the wheels are going round.

The BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN will publish a coupon every week until further notice, giving readers free admission to Lexington Park, where almost everything upon the ground is free.

FOUR CLOWNS AT VANITY FAIR MAKE FUN FOR CROWDS

Vanity Fair, the famous Rhode Island Summer Park, covers a great area. Its central attraction is the splendidly illuminated Shoot-the-Chutes on the Lagoon. This is situated in the centre, between two ridges of land forming a natural valley, with the entrance and administration offices in the fore and the chute tower pavilion and Flatting the Fiances buildings on the higher eminence. The chutes are provided with a multitude of small illuminated towers. At the east end of the lagoon is the band stand, where the Springfield Brass Band daily renders beautiful concert music.

Still nearer the entrance is the arena presided over by the famous old showman James R. Adams, who personally will be all over week.

Around the sides of the park are situated the other attractions. Many new buildings are going up and being completed for the occupancy each week. For variation, the ground employs four handsome uniformed policemen and attendants, four interesting clowns, each one a feature in himself.

Thousands of SUNDAY AMERICAN coupons are being received at Vanity Fair this week.

FINE THEATRE IS OPEN TO PUBLIC AT CANOBIE LAKE

Few among the thousands who visit Canobie Lake Park realize that the surrounding country furnishes about two-thirds of the witch hazel produced in the world. During the season perhaps 500 boys and girls earn their pin-money and candy money, gathering the twigs and branches of the witch hazel bushes and dragging them to the factory to be ground up and distilled into extract hamamelis, as the druggist would put it.

A record number of SUNDAY AMERICAN coupon holders visited Canobie Lake Park this week and enjoyed twenty-five cents' worth of attractions as guests of the newspaper. Next week their coupons will call for admission to the new theatre just opened, the bowling alleys and the shooting gallery.

COUPON HOLDERS ALWAYS WELCOME AT WHITE CITY

Manager White of White City, at Worcester, when asked to-day about the success of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN coupon plan at his picturesque park, spoke unqualified in its favor. He said:

"The AMERICAN coupon plan is a great success. It gives the public an opportunity to enjoy many of the park attractions without expense. With such a varied list of amusements, they are bound to make the rounds and fill out the day. If any are short of money and have only coupons to use, they are just as welcome.

"Among our big features are the old mill, the railway, chutes, the arena, the transformation illusion, Wonderland and a half dozen other novelties."

GALL-STONES

These attacks occur at short intervals, and will continue and increase in severity until the Gall Stones are discharged from the Gall Bladder. If neglected, this trouble will certainly and quickly develop into very serious liver diseases, which will be much more difficult to cure.

At the very first sign of trouble take APPENDIXINE, which will dissolve and expel the Gall Stones, positively restoring the full and normal functions of the liver. APPENDIXINE is the natural, healthful and sure remedy and tonic for these organs. Price $1 per bottle. Write for interesting booklet.

BABY WITS CONTEST FOR $500 LOT

Has Your Child Said Something Bright? Write it Down and Send It in.

SAYING MAY WIN PRIZE

The sparkling stream of baby wit flows on regardless of incridity.

More and brighter sayings come in response to the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN'S $500 building lot call for Boston's brightest baby.

Here is the likeness of one baby contestant. Master Knowlton is three years old and the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Knowlton of Avon place, Arlington.

Two years ago at a baby show in Woonsocket, R. I., Baby Knowlton won the first prize.

Besides being a contestant for the bright sayings, he is vying for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN'S prize for beauty contest.

He is a bright, happy, healthy looking boy, and his parents say that he is as bright as he looks.

Parents are apt to be prejudiced, but here is a sample witticism.

He approached his father the other night and asked:

"Have you any candy in your pocket, papa?"

"I don't know," replied his father, "but I will look."

"No, don't look, papa," he said. "It is dark in your pocket—feel."

Can your baby beat that?

Sure, he can!

"Well, let's hear him do it.

Scribble down his words and send them along.

NOT IN HIS FEET

ONE of these recent hot days my little David, four years old, came in, flushed and red. Laying his head on the table he said, "Glory be to the Lord of Heaven, mamma!"

"What is the matter, David?" I asked.

He said he had a headache, and naturally enough I asked "Where does it ache, dear?"

Lifting his head in surprise, he looked at me and said, "Do you s'pose it is in my feet?"

TOOK IT WITH HIM.

I WAS going down stairs and told my son Harrison, three and a half years old, to sit on his little chair and not leave it until I returned. In a short while I heard him walking around overhead. When I came up stairs I said: "Harrison, did you leave that chair while I was down stairs?" He quickly replied: "Oh, no, mamma. I took it with me where ever I went."

Irene, aged two years, disliked very much having her hair combed. Seeing her mother with brush and comb in hand, she got down on her knees and said: "Oh, mamaun, me say my prayers first."

WOULDN'T BE NAUGHTY.

LITTLE BEAL'S Uncle Bill died a short while ago and she missed him very much. One night she said: "Mamma, Uncle Bill must have a girl up in heaven, for he never comes to see Beal any more."

Beal's father brought home two pairs of pants for Beal's small cousin. Her mother tried a pair on Beal and let her go out in the yard to play. She called her in later to have her face washed and Beal answered quickly: "No, no, mamma! Boys aren't have dirty faces, and papa will not buy me any more pants if I get washed."

HAS NEW GIRL.

GERTRUDE, aged five, was asked to spell "dog." She said, "d-o-g," then "oh, mamma, I don't want to say that naughty word. G is an awful naughty word. Can't I say d?"

When she got up on the morning of her sister's birthday she asked if she must go to school. When I said yes, she said: "I don't see why I have to go to school on my birthday and on sister's birthday, when everybody stays at home on George Washington's birthday."

MANGLED BODY HURLED INTO ELECTRIC CAR

New York Sleuths Fail to Solve Mysterious Death of Young Man.

TROLLEY CREW ARRESTED

NEW YORK, June 27.—Baffled to explain how the mangled body of a young man was catapulted through the window of a Third avenue trolley car near the east tower of the Brooklyn bridge, the New York Police Department has assigned its cleverest detectives to account for the tragedy.

The victim is believed, from cards found in his pockets, to have been John Nelson, a Brooklyn machinist. It is impossible to say whether he killed himself, was murdered, or died by accident.

The car was approaching the bridge tower when the body crashed through the rear platform window into the centre of the aisle. The neck and jaw were broken, and two ribs were crushed in.

The body couldn't have fallen from directly overhead, for the car roof extends three feet over the window. There were no wagons or automobiles about which might have struck and hurled it into the air.

The police figured that the man must have tumbled from an "L" car or cable train, struck a pillar and bounded sideways into the car. But no car can be found from which a man fell or jumped. There was a panic in the car when the corpse bounded through the window. The conductor and motorman were arrested.

ALLOTS CASH FOR FOURTH

Jamaica Plain Citizens' Association, $1,000. The remainder goes to local celebrations.

BURIAL ALIVE OF BABY MAY KILL MOTHER

By Boston American Leased Wire.

WESTCHESTER, Pa., June 27.—Mrs. Edna Lewis, wife of Irwin Lewis, who is charged with burying his five-year-old stepdaughter alive, is here stricken at the thought that she is to become mother of Lewis's child, believing him the slayer of her first born. Her revulsion of feeling has precipitated a nervous collapse and fear is expressed for her life.

"My God, I would rather die," she sobbed to-day. I did not know that he illtreated my poor little Mary when my back was turned and was pleading to murder her because he was jealous of my love for my own baby.

"I believe that is why he murdered her. Yes, I believe he did it now. He could not have loved me or he would never have done it."

Serious as that of his wife, He eases in Lewis's mental condition is almost as his cell when not under the influence of morphine, which the jail officials have to administer to keep him quiet. He suffers from hallucinations that little Mary's spirit lingers constantly near his cell.

"Take her away!" he shrieks. "My God, there is blood upon her face—and her hand is raised to ward off my fist—do you hear, my fist."

It developed to-day that Lewis had confided to a farmer living near his own farm the fact that he had stole the child just as he afterwards admitted it to the District Attorney, both statements being vouched for by the latter.

TRAMP STEAMER IS HELD FOR COLLISION

The British tramp steamship Chelsea, which on Sunday night rammed and sank the Boston schooner T. Charlton Henry off Montauk Point, has been libelled in $150,000 at Norfolk, Va., by Captain F. P. Sanford of the Henry.

HUNTS VIOLATIONS OF EIGHT-HOUR LAW

To-day, by direction of District Attorney Moran, Lieutenant Lee is investigating the charges filed by Weiter A. Kennedy of Dorchester, relative to the alleged coercion of city employes in the park department, and also the alleged flagrant violations of the eight-hour law which governs city employes.

World's Champion Woman Swimmer Gives Her Third Lesson on

How to Learn to Swim

Study This Series and Learn the Art Now

By Anette Kellerman,

Champion Woman Swimmer of the World

LESSON NO. 3—SWIMMING ON THE BACK

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

SWIMMING on the back is probably the easiest, least fatiguing and most thoroughly enjoyable way there is to swim. It is called the "lazy stroke," for with it one may loll along, taking as few strokes as one cares to and still be keeping safely afloat and in very little danger of having the head go under or having a saucy little wave splash into the mouth at the very moment a long breath is being taken in.

Having acquired the knack of keeping afloat, taught in the first lesson of this series, and also the breast stroke, the back stroke will come very easy.

The first thing is to lie on the water as in the position for floating, with the hands stroked out behind the head and held together by the thumbs interlocking. When ready for the stroke, let go of the thumbs, and bring the arms from out beyond the head clear down to the side of your hips, in as wide a circle as possible, keeping the fingers slightly closed, using the hands as oars, so to speak. This should be done slowly, and at the finish of the stroke one should lie perfectly still, allowing one's self to get the full benefit of the momentum acquired from the stroke. This is called "getting a run."

The Reason for the Kick

As the oars from the stroke is about expended, draw the feet up so that the heels will be directly under and pointing up at the centre of the body. You are then ready for the kick, and the object of the kick in the back stroke is not so much to send you ahead as it is to offset the protective action of getting the hands back into position for another drive through the water.

The hands are brought back by bringing them from the hips, where they finish the stroke, across the stomach where they should be closely guarded and brought up over the body till they are about at the chin, when the hands separate and, palms upward, are sent out on each side of the head, as far as you can reach, to join again for another stroke as before.

While the hands are sent upward over the body for another stroke, the feet, which we have drawn up under the body, are spread apart slightly, kicked out to their full length and then brought together, always with the toes extended, so that the soles of the feet afford all the driving surface of a pair of hands.

Throw Head Back

In swimming on the back the head should always be thrown away back, bringing the mouth as high out of the water as possible. Thus breathing is always easy to the back stroke, and should accordingly do away with all haste in the movements, for, after all, the only excuse for haste in the strokes is to get the head high enough out of water as often as possible so that we may breathe when we like. But in swimming on the back this haste is not necessary. We are always able to breathe at perfect ease, which in itself makes the backstroke one of the easiest and most delightful there is.

Do not think from this, however, that great speed is not possible with the back stroke. It is one of the fastest freak strokes there is, as the Boston Scudettos of the New York Athletic Club, who has the back stroke down to a science, swims fifty yards with it well under thirty seconds, or, in other words, close to the world's record for the distance made with the crawl stroke.

But that is done with the racing back stroke, an entirely different affair from that which I have described above. In the racing back stroke the arms are used most effectively by being brought out of the water and stuck far out behind the head, one after another, the hands entering as in the lazy, underwater stroke.

The Racing Back Stroke

The above illustration shows the racing back stroke, the hands now brought in the same big sweep from behind the head down to the hips, but alternately instead of together, as in the other stroke. And when they are down at the hips, each is sent out over the water and swung at once lifted out of the water and brought high and clear of the waves, back over the head, the while the other is coming down with the pull ahead.

In the racing back stroke the legs are also used in a vastly different way. Instead of being brought up under the body and kicked out together, the feet are both kicked up and down, beating the surface of the water into a froth, irrespective of any rhythm with the arms. You may have noticed small boys on a beach or in the river doing "the windmill," with their arms at their sides, lying on their backs and churning up the water in great style with the legs, at the same time going ahead at no mean pace. Well, that needlessly useless leg work is the keynote of the foot work used in the racing stroke. It is nothing more than the crawl stroke kick, upside down.

The next lesson will be on the side stroke, both underhand and overhand.

An Introduction Is a Girl's Safeguard in Making Friends

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have read with great interest your little tilt with C. B. A. on the subject of introductions. C. B. A. calls you a stickler. If your repeated advice on this subject constitutes stickling, then I say to coin a phrase, "stickle some more," only louder. C. B. A.'s case is far wide of the mark at which you aim.

Girls, let me say this, and I say it from experience and from the confessions of numberless men, who make a practice of "picking up" acquaintances. They are not looking for a girl to take to Sunday school, and they do not expect to find a Sunday School girl.

The chances are 1 to 100 that the girl will appear worse than she is, because she does not wish to be thought "slow." She slips little by little until the man thinks his first opinion verified, based as it is upon the very reason that she so readily acquiesced to the acquaintance.

Recently we read in the AMERICAN of a young girl, whose story began: "I thought it would be such fun to meet the stranger," and ended: "I was so ashamed to go home, so changed my name to ——, my self."

She thought that it would be such harmless fun, and if any one had warned her she would have laughed, as all girls do, saying: "You're so old fashioned. Where's the harm?" Is there not a very familiar ring in these words?

The lowest districts of every city are filled with women who started out from home of an evening as innocent as any who read this paper. Having met a stranger, good fellowship led to eating, eating to drinking, drinking to oblivion.

Of course most of the girls who read these columns would not drink. I am sorry to say that quite a number would drink for fear of being thought "slow." But even if you do not drink you are always in danger with a stranger.

The statements just made are the confessions of the majority of women whose lives are wrecked. A very small number of them were blatantly bad.

Miss Fairfax states that an introduction is a sort of a voucher for the party introduced, but I would warn any girl not to choose these vouchers with care. If she or her girl acquaintances have the habit of "picking up" friends in this way, do not accept her introduction as a license to continue the acquaintance. She would introduce you to her if she pretty sure to be the chum of some one whom she has "picked up" and of the same sort.

You cannot be too careful. In spite of our romantic friend, C. B. A., I hope Miss Fairfax will "stickle some more, only louder."

INTERESTED.

GIRLS, I want you to read every word of what I have said, and the next time that a man tries to thrust his acquaintance upon you I want you to remember what "interested" has written.

I know quite well that in many cases no harm arises from friendships formed in such a way, but there is always the risk, and it is the risk that there is no necessity of your running.

Perfect Nonsense

SOMETIMES a girl writes that she has "fallen desperately in love" with a man whom she has seen day after day, but has never met.

That is perfect nonsense, you know, for no girl really falls in love with a man to whom she has never spoken to. She may have taken a romantic liking to him, because he is handsome or interesting in appearance, but real love on such a meagre basis is out of the question.

If a man becomes very much interested in a girl he usually finds some way to get introduced to her. He may take time, but if he is in earnest he usually succeeds.

Ask your own friends how they feel on this question of introduction. I think you will find that their views are very similar to those of "Interested."

A Sensible View

BUT it is not enough that the men should have the proper view of the question. The girls are the ones who must take the right stand, and stick to it.

Nearly every girl is filled with the ambition to be well bred and ladylike, to appear as though she were capable of filling any social position to which she might be called. I can assure you, dear girls, that no thoroughly ladylike girl would accept a man as host to take the liberty of forcing his acquaintance upon her without a proper introduction.

JEWELED MITTEN IS NEWEST PARIS FAD

Gems Set in Chains of Purest Gold

The Latest Fashion in Jewelry, Mitten of Gold Chain Work Set with Gems.

(From the London Sphere)

PARIS society has a new fad in jewelry, which seems destined to become the most popular of the season. It is a jeweled mitten, which was worn for the first time a few days ago by a charming young French actress, who created a sensation in one of the boulevard cafes by appearing with this novel adornment.

The gem-covered mitten, which in Europe costs as much as $500, covers the entire back of the hand, leaving the fingers and wrist bare.

It can be made of diamonds, pearls or any precious stones set in gold chains, and like a lorgnette, the one who desires to be in fashion is wealthy enough, may be that of a crown for a royal head.

The mitten which has set so elegy that it is made of diamonds and rubies strung on a network of chains of gold.

Many jewelers have been asked to make duplicates of it and some society women have ordered even more costly mittens. Apparently it is to become more of a rage than the jeweled anklets which were somewhat in favor in society a few years ago.

How Long Before This New Craze Is Adopted in Newport?

Covers Back of Hand, Leaving Wrist and Fingers Uncovered

Jewelers are wondering how long it will take this newest craze to come across the water. One good judge of the trend of fads in gems predicts that the jeweled mitten will be seen at Newport before the close of the present season.

BAKED LEMON PUDDING

ONE quart of milk, two cups of bread crumbs, four eggs, whites and yolks beaten separately; butter size of an egg, one cup sugar, one large lemon, juice and grated rind. Heat milk and pour over breadcrumbs, add butter, cover and let get soft. When cool beat sugar and yolks, and add to the mixture also grated rind. Bake in a buttered dish until firm and slightly brown, from one-half to three-quarters of an hour. When done draw it to the door of the oven and cover with a meringue made of the whites of the eggs beaten to a froth with four tablespoons of powdered sugar and the lemon juice, put back in the oven and brown to a light straw color. Eat warm with lemon sauce.

ENLISH FRUIT CAKE

ONE pound of currants, one pound small seedless raisins, four eggs, half-pound sugar, one nutmeg grated, half pound butter, one pint flour, one teaspoon soda, one ounce citron cut very fine, four teaspoons baking powder, small teaspoon salt. Make the flour, soda and baking powder stiff together, then rub in the butter, add sugar, fruit and nutmeg, and mix well. Mix well the dry ingredients, beat the eggs to a froth and add to the mixture, add a little milk, as this needs to be almost as stiff as dough. Bake in a slow oven from an hour and a quarter. This makes two cakes and the longer it is kept the better. It is a recipe that has been used in my family for years.

HOW TO BE BEAUTIFUL

By the Professor

SO many walls come in regarding the hair that I shall answer a dozen or more of them at once. Almost all the ills that the scalp is subject to may be cured by the same treatment—that is, by keeping it clean and healthy.

Many overdo the thing and think they are deserving of praise for washing the hair every few days, looking down in scorn upon the woman who sighs less often to the shampooer but once a month, yet the latter nearly always has a wealth of the "crowning glory" that turn the former green with envy.

That is, of course, if the woman who washes her hair only when actually necessary does not let it go unattended in the meantime. A good brushing, either by self daily or nightly, brushed with long strokes and without irritating the scalp, if it is inclined to be oily an occasional application of a good tonic after shampooing or bay rum will keep the scalp perfectly clean.

An occasional orris root brushing will help wonderfully and will produce the need of soap and water, as the orris root absorbs the surplus oil and will do away with carrying them off with it when brushed out.

If the hair is inclined to be dry, apply a few drops of red vaseline to the palms of the hands and rub the scalp every other night. The application of these things and the massage accompanying it will keep the scalp free of dandruff.

The massage is much more to be recommended than a hard brushing, which many think necessary to arouse the circulation. The scalp is a very tender part of the body and should always be treated kindly under any circumstances.

Give your hair the benefit of all the sunshine you can and always allow it to hang free and loose for at least one hour during the day, keeping it well opened up to the air.

Once a month drop on the scalp at night a few drops of cool oil and massage it well. The tip the head until morning and shampoo. If the hair is not grey, with egg shampoo. Dry in the sun, if possible, rubbing dry.

This course of treatment will keep any head of hair in fine condition if faithfully followed up; that is, if the health is good. There is nothing more quickly shows a state of ill-health than the hair, and no matter what you do it will not be healthy if the body is sick.

KEEP CURL IN HAIR

DEAR PROFESSOR:

My hair is very short and straight around my forehead and I would be glad to get some simple, inexpensive formula for making it curly, as I do not like to put it up in curlers every night and it will not stay curled. VIOLET.

Soak a few quince seeds in a little water and wet the hair, parting and brushing it slightly with this liquid before putting it up in the evening. This will keep the curl in and is harmless.

HARMLESS ROUGE

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you kindly advise me whether or a rouge will hurt the face, that is, will it hurt the skin or cause the hair grow? My face is generally pale and to dim the cheeks greatly improves my appearance, for which reason I hate to give up the use of it. If it is injurious, is there any preparation to put on before using it that will shield the skin from harm?

DO DO.

It is entirely owing to the kind you use whether or not it is harmful. Make your own rouge by the following formula and you can use it without injury: One-half free ounce box of carmine, one dram oil of almonds, two ounces of French chalk. Sift the powdered carmine thoroughly with the chalk and gradually work in the oil. If you are naturally pale the use of a little rouge is almost necessary in order to look your best, but it should be very carefully and very sparingly applied, for insure success—just enough to give the appearance of a glow of health is no more.

FOR FRECKLES

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you kindly give me some remedy for freckles, something that will not hurt my face? MARGARET.

USE witchhazel freely on the face and the freckles will not come so easily nor be large in the first place. When you are to be exposed to the sun and wind dab the face frequently with the witchhazel. Rubbing the face with lemon will sometimes remove the freckles and the use of plenty of powder will do much to hide them. However, if this care does not get rid of them try the following lotion which is recommended for removing freckles: 2 oz. witchhazel; 8 grains bichloride of mercury in coarse powder. Dissolve 2 oz. rose water and shake until dissolved. Dab on freckles, but be careful that this lotion does not get in the eyes, and do not leave it in the way of careless persons, as it is poisonous.

Advice to Anxious Sweethearts

By Beatrice Fairfax

DON'T BE IMPATIENT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl, seventeen years of age, and am desperately in love with a young man five years my senior. I know he thinks a great deal of me. The only objection is that my mother thinks I am too young to keep company. I haven't the least intention to marry until I am many years of age, but calls at the house very often. He has a steady position and is looking for a wife. Now, Miss Fairfax, please advise me whether I ought give him up, which I know would be impossible, or go with him and when I become of age tell my mother? BUNCH.

YOU can afford to abide by your mother's decision. She knows more of young men's attentions and win her approval, particularly when you say you do not intend to marry for five years. If I were you, he will wait and win your mother's favor as well as your own.

DO YOU CARE FOR HIM?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been reading your letters to my friends and would like to have your advice myself. I have been keeping company with a fellow for two years and he has been a fellow out with him. He has gone with another girl, and I have gone with others, but now I want my old friend back. Please tell me how to win him in your favor. D. E. C.

ARE you sure you care for him? If it has been only a sweetheart's quarrel it seems to me that you can show him by your manner that you are ready to forgive him, unless you were at fault, in which case you should be ready to make the proper apology and willingly. I am frail that the bonds between you were not very strong, or you would not have been so eager to accept the attentions of others.

Handy Things for Housewives to Know

A PIECE of tin about two feet square, with tacks driven through it is handy when cleaning woodwork to keep the cloth from touching the walls and soiling them. It can also run easily when dusting behind the radiator. Simply hold the tin with one hand along the work and it can be done rapidly.

* * *

Rooms are furnished nowadays with a view to effect rather than to comfort. Furniture is charming; never has better taste been displayed, generally speaking, in furnishing. And yet it is rare, when one comes to think of it, that one goes into a really cozy, "comfy" room, where the average woman looks thoroughly at home, and one feels at once rested in mind and body.

* * *

If you wish to cover your floor with linoleum and the boards are warped, fill the cracks with plaster of paris, and your linoleum will not become worn.

* * *

The very best dishcloths are made of Turkish toweling. They wash again and again and look like new. After using, always wash a dishcloth in hot soda suds, then rinse thoroughly and hang in the air to dry. A dirty dishcloth is a disgrace to a housekeeper.

* * *

Much time may be saved if after washing a dish it be dropped into a pan of hot water and allowed to remain until several have collected there. Have another pan ready and pile the dishes taken from the hot water loosely in it. By the time the pots and kettles are washed the earthen dishes will be dry. The dishes will shine more than when dried with a cloth.

"THE HERITAGE OF HATE"

CHAPTER LIII.

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

LEIGH'S statement that it was the eve of Pauline's wedding, there was nothing odd enough to excite comment in the part of Mrs. Heath ordering the close carriage at 9:30 o'clock at night with the purpose of being driven to Mrs. Wynn's home to pay a call to the bridegroom-elect.

Pauline greeted the astounding remark from the hall just as her stepmother was about to enter the parlor, where the bridegroom-elect was in soft, cream silk, and Mrs. Heath in her black velvet, over which the diamonds flashed and glittered. That wonderful, delicate face, set once so coldly and tenderly aside with its frame of bright hair of a warm tawny gold, was certainly not the face of any man to win it—and, having won it, to keep it in spite of all worldly considerations.

Assuredly she would find Gilbert Wynn's passion for Pauline a hard matter to struggle against in the little scene she was to witness with him to-night.

"Are you ill?" she asked Pauline nervously, "You look as though you were."

Pauline might have answered that she was either ill or nervous—perhaps both—she would bring. But she did not. She only said that she was tired. Her eyes showed some surprise at seeing that her stepmother intended to go out. But Mrs. Heath did not enlighten her as to the object of this somewhat late excursion.

She gave the coachman orders to drive fast. Pauline's puzzled amusement thought it was, was nothing to what the inferno at the back of the carriage revealed her to be as the result of this moment's recent communication that she had again seen Claude Heath had evidently disturbed her.

In the Shadow.

She looked out impatiently upon the road as the carriage rolled along, through half-way between the hall and Wynn's home she noticed the figure of a man tramping along in the shadow close by the hedge. In her ignorance of the intentions of destiny she did not vouchsafe him a second thought.

The carriage turned in at the gates of the Wynn home and drew up before the door of the beautiful house—very beautiful now with its wealth of flowers in answer to the inquiry, it was elicited that Mr. Wynn had not yet gone out. Mrs. Heath was shown into his private room.

It was a room for the transaction of business and pleasure appointed to have every requisite and luxury for being presented by the two large bureaus and the big writing table loaded with papers and letters. Nothing in the surroundings indicated that the owner was to be married to-morrow on his honeymoon tour.

There were one or two letters lying open on the writing table, and she sat down to read them, but Mrs. Heath had possessed a dangerous—albeit to her perfidious—curiosity. Instead of applying into matters not intended for her perusal.

These particular letters chanced to be unimportant, and therefore uninteresting—but the handwriting of one of them was of a peculiar and distinctive character. She took up a pen that lay conveniently near and began to amuse herself by imitating it on a sheet of note paper lying invitingly fingers worked. They were not very steady in their movements, but the reproduced the peculiarities of the strange penmanship with a fairly marvellous exactness.

"Very good indeed! Capital! Upon my word, you can't tell the imitation from the original!"

Mrs. Heath stopped in her playful work and dropped the pen as if it had been hot. Looking up she saw Gilbert Wynn standing behind her chair. He had come in unheard by her absorbed reading from his dressing room, and was evidently ready to go out.

He held, striking features looked handsome even then in his black mustache and was immaculate in his dress coat. Diamond studs and a bouquet of white carnations decorated the buttonhole of his dress coat.

Foretells Disaster

An odor of champagne had entered with him, and the excitement of champagne was in his eyes. He was smiling graciously, but amid the graciousness there lurked a reckless mirth which sent an uncomfortable feeling through his visitor's mind.

"I was not aware myself while I waited for you," she explained. "I am glad you have not kept me waiting over."

"I told Leigh and the rest of them that I should probably be late," he said, "They will excuse me if I turn up punctually at a political dinner on the eve of his wedding."

He spoke carelessly and naturally, in spite of the suspicion which had come to her into his mind that it might be Mrs. Heath and not Leigh who had forged his signature to the $50 check a few weeks ago. In another hour Leigh would be gone, and the thrust suspicion from him as absurd, being totally ignorant of the secret depths of her nature.

He threw himself carelessly into a low chair, facing that. Then, for the first time, he became aware of the future mother-in-law's unusual agitation.

"What is the matter?" he asked, a shade clouding on the gayety of his own countenance. "Has anything gone wrong? I was never surprised to hear that you had come here so late."

"Nothing has gone wrong yet," Mrs. Heath replied, with an impressive significance in her tones. She was standing by her gloves again, as though to hide the nervousness of her manner. "But everything will go wrong if you marry Pauline to-morrow. I tell you it will mean disaster—nothing short of disaster—if!"

Champion Model Husband Found! But Not In Hub

MOLLYCODDLE? NAY! BUT HE SEWS BUTTONS

Chicago Claims This Record Benedict Whose Wife Is Well-Known Artist.

CALLS HER "BETTER HALF"

THE world's champion model husband has been found and interviewed. Strange to say, he lives in Chicago.

According to Dr. Albert E. Palmer, for he it is who blushingly bears this proud title, the model husband is one who openly acknowledges his wife the "better half," who decides no important question affecting the family's welfare without his wife's opinion, and who can sew on a button with as much skill as he can light a cigar.

And be it known that Dr. Palmer is no mollycoddle; he is well fitted to stand forth, an authority upon the subject of "Happy Homes, and the Cause Thereof."

And wherein does the doctor qualify as an expert?

He is the winner of the blue ribbon at the "Husband Show" given at the home of Mrs. James Sydney Mercklongh, at Chicago. He is the "Blue Ribbon" husband, the best ever. He is a man who embodies theory with example. He is the personification of what he advises in the abstract. He is a shining example of what he says a husband should be, and if he isn't happy he has been afraid to say so.

An Embarrassed Hero.

"How does it feel to be the best in the city?" he was asked.

The question obviously embarrassed him. He looked furtively about, stroked his classic brow in momentary perplexity, and then thoughtfully replied:

"Well, well, I hardly know. You see, I am so overcome by the surprise of—er—the honor of the thing, that I've never known that I haven't had a chance yet to ask my wife. Just wait, my dear fellow, until I go and talk to her—ask her about it, don't you know."

Enter Mrs. Palmer, better known as Pauline Palmer, the artist, who was at work in her studio with palette and brush. Her pose was perfect, and she smiled encouragingly, though inquiringly, at her husband and his interviewer.

Qualls at Interview.

"The points in which you are to excel all other husbands," ventured the questioner, emboldened by the fact that Dr. Palmer was all there since the advent of his better half, "are truthfulness, manners, devotion and gallantry. Now, what are your special qualifications in these particulars?"

"Really," faltered the Doctor, glancing at his wife for inspiration and approbation, "really, don't you know, I ought'n to say anything about that. Ask her."

Mrs. Palmer beamed on her husband, smiled proudly at her husband's delicate modesty, and assumed responsibility for the verity of subsequent declarations.

"What do you regard as the incident of the doctor's life most strongly bringing out his truthfulness?"

"Why," Mrs. Palmer said in benign surprise, "he is always truthful, aren't you, dear?"

Modestly Admits It.

And Mr. Palmer modestly admitted that he always tried to be. It was a point in his favor that, like some husbands in the same position might have done, he did not assert that he was always truthful, but simply that he "tried to be." If he had said that he actually was always truthful it would have created a doubt in the minds of other but less impecunate men that he was four-flushing. But to say that he always tried to be did not necessarily establish his superiority over other men, although Mrs. Palmer may not have looked at it that way.

"And," she pursued, "he is a Chesterfield for manners, and a veritable Romeo for devotion, aren't you, dear?"

Dr. Palmer again smiled and was willing to take his wife's word for it and let it go at that.

It was very plain that he was of surpassing gallantry, and if the women were to judge, had hit upon the true fact, his qualifications are of such pre-eminently desirable nature that it were folly to try to find instances of exceptional distinction.

Questions for Hubbies.

In the early blush, however, these other qualifications are set forth:

Although twice married, his wife is the only woman he ever loved.

He can button back-action shirt waists with facility and ease. That is, when they are his wife's, of course.

In his habits he is distinctively domestic.

He can sew on buttons of all kinds, which saves his wife a great deal of trouble, and which is a qualification that would please any woman.

He pays the milliner and modiste without question and as often as he has the chance.

He never swears in English, whether or not he be a linguist is not all-vital.

He is a good judge of textiles, and can distinguish point d'esprit from peek-a-boo insertion, and can call chints by its real name upon sight.

He can doubtless do lots of other things, but are not these enough?

How many Boston husbands could take a blue ribbon on such specifications?

BAD PLACE TO HUNT FORTUNE

That South America is not a good field for Americans who are seeking a fortune is the opinion of several passengers who reached Boston on the Houston line steamer Hesperides from Buenos Ayres and Montevideo to-day.

"It is a country that the man with small means should avoid, said J. W. O'Hara, American Consul at Buenos Ayres, who with his wife, four children and his twins, are returning to their home at Peru, Indiana, for a visit.

Three Western mining prospectors, Charles Anderson, Charles Wesley and Hugo Kroes, declare that they will never go to South America again. Guido Howarth, an American sculptor who went to Buenos Ayres several months ago, has a good opinion of the better class of South American, but agrees that the country is not one in which the ordinary man can attain prosperity.

MR. HUSBAND! ARE YOU UP TO THIS STANDARD?

HE is always truthful.
He is a Chesterfield for manners.
He is a Romeo for devotion.
He can button a back-action shirt waist with ease.
He can sew on a button.
He is domestic in his habits.
He never swears in English.
He can distinguish point d'esprit from peek-a-boo insertion, and call chints by name on sight.
He pays the milliner and modiste.

KEPT DIVORCE SECRET FROM HUSBAND 4 YEARS

Startling Ciscovery of Providence Man, Who Found Court Papers in Old Trunk in "Wife's" Room.

PROVIDENCE, June 27.—A divorce decree, four years old, obtained by his wife, with whom he has been living since then in ignorance of the court action, has been discovered by Henry H. Gibbs in an old trunk, at his home, No. 33 Rice-gold street, this city. As a result, Gibbs has left his wife.

"I am glad I am parted from this woman," Gibbs said to-day. "I was in California in 1903, and my wife got the divorce against me then, I find by the papers I now have in my possession. The divorce was surreptitiously obtained on the ground of 'neglect to provide,' but it was a false action.

"I did not know I was living with a woman who had divorced me, until to-day. I am sorry I did not know it before."

Incidentally Gibbs says he found other papers which tend to show that his "wife" had been corresponding with a Boston man.

Happiness Shortlived.

The full story of the troubles between Gibbs and his wife are told by himself as follows: One April 28, 1899, Henry H. Gibbs and Alma Lindgren of No. 10 West River street, Orange, Mass., were married at Wendell, Mass., by Nelson D. Plum, a justice of the peace. They lived happily for some time together, then the husband went away on a business trip to Los Angeles, Cal. His wife said that she did not want to go, and so was left with her aunt in Lincoln Park, this city.

The following May, while on the way back here, Gibbs's wife went to Schenectady to meet him. At the end of six weeks both went to Schenectady.

Lived as Man and Wife.

They remained there about two and one-half years, living as man and wife. At the end of this time, Mrs. Gibbs, her husband says, took some jewelry and money valued at about $1,100, and ran away. Her husband telephoned to the aunt, Mrs. A. Lundgren, at Lincoln Park, and was informed that the woman was there. He came on immediately and after a scene with his wife, decided to take her back to Schenectady with him. Together they lived for over a year and nothing happened to mar their happiness. In 1906 they moved to Pittsfield, Mass., but soon separated.

Papers Hidden in Trunk.

Last month she wrote to him asking to be taken back and once again the couple reunited and went to live at No. 33 Ringgold street, Providence.

While packing the trunks, he said, preparatory to going on a Summer trip with his wife, Mr. Gibbs found a decree of divorce between the woman and himself, taken out when he was in Los Angeles on the business trip on April 20, 1905. He also found letters from a man on Tremont street in Boston.

VIRGINIA TOWN PREY TO FIRE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHRISTIANSBURG, Va., June 27.—The business portion of Christiansburg being swept by fire originating in Graham's foundry, two large stores, two large livery stables, a large lumber mill and yard and several residences are in flames.

The fire is beyond the control of citizens, and the Roanoke fire department on a special train is being rushed here. The fire is steadily moving toward the centre of the town. Judging Hotel, the large wholesale house of Evans and Flanagan and the office and store building of Waters brothers are threatened. All telephone, light and telegraph wires are down. The town has not water protection.

PLAN BANQUET TO J. P. BRENNAN

Arrangements are being made by the high officers of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters for the reception and banquet to be tendered to Joseph P. Brennan. Mr. Brennan had full charge of the detail work incident to the convention held in Boston recently, and the precision which characterised his work netted the order several hundred dollars. This has been rather unusual in the history of the organization, for in the past the expenses attending the annual gathering necessitated a drain on the treasury.

Not Anty Drudge's Kind of Economy.

Mrs. Frugal—"Look at this box of laundry soap, Anty Drudge. Buying so much, I got it cheap. Isn't that Economy?"

Anty Drudge—"Economy nothing. You've bought yourself a lot of hard work if you use that soap. Fels-Naptha saves hard work, does away with boiling and makes the clothes cleaner. Economy? Well, I guess not."

Don't throw away the wrapper when you buy a cake of Fels-Naptha soap. Pin it up in your kitchen or laundry where you can read plainly the directions printed on the back. They're the whole secret of the easy Fels-Naptha way of washing—the modern way.

It's just as important to follow directions in washing with Fels-Naptha as it is in taking medicine. Used the Fels-Naptha way, Fels-Naptha soap will save you time, trouble, hard work, fuel and money.

BRITISH "400" TO FETE WIFE OF BRICKLAYER

Charm of Baroness Ashburton, "Florodora Girl," Opens Exclusive Portals to Mother.

SOCIETY OFFERS WELCOME

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 27.—The wife of a New York bricklayer to be received by the cream of British society!

"Dear me!" gasp the astonished public. "What of it?" coolly interrogates the woman herself.

She is Mrs. James Donnelly, mother of the former stage beauty and "Florodora" girl, Frances Belmont, who now bears the title of Baroness Ashburton. It is through this daughter, whose charm and beauty as Lord Ashburton's wife have won for her the favor of the most select circles in England, that Mrs. Donnelly is to be presented to society abroad.

A modest, simple woman, accustomed only to small social pleasures and to the ways of her home and family, Mrs. Donnelly will be transplanted to an entirely new world—a world of fashion and gaiety and brilliancy such as she in her unpretentious life has never dreamed of entering.

From a modest, pretty little cottage in White Plains to the splendid castles and villas and town houses over which her daughter presides will be a metamorphosis magical enough to take away the breath of many a woman better situated in life than Mrs. Donnelly.

EX-MRS. HANNA TO WED AGAIN?

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 27.—A dispatch from Cleveland states that a rumor is current in the smart set that Daisy Gordon Hanna, divorced wife of Dan R. Hanna, would soon become the bride of Franklin Pelton of New York. Confirmation of the report could not be obtained in Cleveland, as Mrs. Hanna is at Mamaroneck, N. Y., and most of her friends would not discuss the matter.

But several of them were inclined to believe she would marry Pelton, especially when they learned that Pelton's wife obtained a divorce Tuesday.

Some said they had understood Mrs. Hanna No. 2 would become the wife of Pelton as soon as his wife obtained legal separation.

Pelton, it was asserted, paid marked attention to Mrs. Hanna during her separation from her husband, and visited her frequently with friends at her home in Cleveland, and saw her whenever she went East.

JIMMY COLLINS HERE WITH ATHLETICS TODAY

BATTING ORDER.

PHILADELPHIA.	BOSTON.
Bartell, f.	Sullivan, c.f.
Nichols, 2b.	Parent, s.s.
Seybold, r.f.	Congalton, r.f.
Davis, 1b.	Barrett, 1.f.

Plank, p.	Winter, p.

Sufficient to say that Jimmy Collins visits us to-day. Popular Jeems, lionized by Hub fans and public because he won two pennants for us, is now helping Connie Mack's Athletics to get after the old rag.

There will be a loyal turnout to see Jimmy and yell a few for the favorite, if bathing size.

In the same old way that Collins warmed himself into the hearts of the diamond followers of the Hub, he has secured a hold on the Quaker devotees, and now Jimmy gets all the bouquets down Slowtown way.

It is noticeable that the Athletics have taken a jump since Collins assumed control of the third corner, and in about every game on the schedule there is Collins's handiwork in the contests.

Mack's men are going the rapid gait just now, and the Pilgrims have got to buckle down to business to get anything on them.

So team is coming down the pike faster than the Quakers at the present time, and they have given the Western clubs some warm receptions on the home field.

Outside of the contest it will be an individual race between Knight and Collins to show supremacy while they are facing each other, and to show the wisdom of the deal which changed them around.

Medgize will have to look his pitchers over carefully before deciding who he will start in for the opening game, and the test may fall to some one of the young stars, with George Winter as a good candidate.

It took Cyrus Young to show the Highlanders the way to defeat in the final clash, and Cy put them to the knife by the score of 6 to 2.

Even Al Orth was forced to admit that he was not in Cy's class, as Griffith gave him the high sign to vacate after the third inning and shoved Keefe, who has been brought along to do odd jobs when the other twirlers got their bumps. Keefe did fine work, as only two hits were made after he got on in the box.

Cy mowed them down in fine shape, to like. One of them was a lucky home run, which failed to disconcert Cy any.

The Highlanders are now away with three out of the five games, more than they should have, but it might have been worse.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

Uncle Cy made good, as usual.

* * *

That change in the batting order seemed to work well.

* * *

Boston got five hits in the first four innings and only one in the fifth.

* * *

When the Kitties slammed out a triple, followed by a single in the first it looked gloomy for Cy, but he fanned the next man.

* * *

Freddie Parent was on the job all right and some of his stops and throws reminded us of his very best days.

* * *

"Wid" Conroy got a lucky home run. The ball bounded into the right field bleachers before Congalton could retrieve it.

* * *

Congalton got his homer on a rap to left. Conroy appeared slow in fielding the hit, which, ordinarily, was only good for three bases.

* * *

Chase made a good attempt to get a two-bagger out of the single and looked like a coon after his slide through the dust to second.

* * *

Moriarty got a pick strong in his language on the coaching lines and Ump Sheridan told him to skidoo.

* * *

Sullivan was so sure of getting Elberfield's fly that it dropped out of his hands. Sully don't often make such breaks.

* * *

Sheridan rushed Hogg off the grounds in quick shape, for Hogg talk was not his decidsun. It looked like a suspension for the pitcher.

BROOKLYN, June 27.—After winning two out of three games from the Giants, the Doves arrived here for a series with the Brooklyn, the first game being on the schedule for to-day.

Both teams are playing high-class ball these days. The Brooklyns certainly have fattened the percentage in the past month. They won five straight from the Quakers, and in their games previously played good, well.

The Giants were only able to take the opener from the Bostons, and that only by a nose-in-the-finish struggle.

The Bostons didn't play McGraw's men yesterday owing to rain.

Gus Dorner is slated to pitch for the visitors to-day, while "Doc" Scanlon is slated to work for the home team.

MAJOR P. TAKES AL RAY'S MEASURE IN RECORD TIME

It was not supposed possible that Major P. was capable of taking the measure of Al. Ray, but did it by marching off with the final heat at the "Mets" matinee over the Charles River Speedway yesterday afternoon in the fastest time in the Spring series, 1.02¾, beating that of Chief White by a half second. In many of the other heats decided the finishes were very close, following is the summary of winners and fastest time in each race:

Class A, pacing—Major P. (D. J. Nellegan, 1.02¾. Class B, trotting—Billy Ross (Frank Ford, 2.08¾. Class F, trotting—Frank Heedle (M. A. Nevins), 1.08¾. Class D, pacing—Geo. Stranger (Fitzgerald & Nevins), 1.09. Class E, pacing—Journeyman (J. Frost), 1.04¾. Class F, trotting—Brownie's Imp (W. J. Lovell), 1.06.

In the spring series of matinees, eight in number, which closed yesterday, the nine silver cups were sent to Isaac Bonnell with Dan Patch; for trotters, and to A. J. Furbush with Chief Willkie, for pacers. Although in the latter instance Major P. had the fastest single heat, yet Chief Willkie's time averaged faster for two heats in a race.

A. J. Furbush secured the silver cup for pacers winning the most heats with Chief Willkie, while to G. Newcomb goes the trophy for trotters with General Lee. However, there arises the question of whether he will be allowed the best of the June 19 race, when he started in the fourth heat and won, when he should have been sent to the stable for not winning a heat. Some of the race committee throw out this heat it will leave a tie between General Lee, Frank Heedle and La Gazelle, and under the conditions they will have to race for the cup among themselves.

BETWEEN HEATS AT THE MATINEE RACES OF "METS" DRIVERS

C. C. Mayberry did not start either Aviets or Chief Willkie in the matinee, having sent them to his farm in Hazen's Junction, N. H., to be prepared for the New Hampshire and Vermont Circuit.

C. C. Blaney is thought racing with the Dorchester Driving Club, through not being matched in the University races against Lynn with his pacing mare, Charmen, as he believes he ought to have had the preference over those who did not race in the matinees at Franklin Field speedway in the Spring.

It was the initial start for Brownie's Imp, and he showed a good racing prospect for his owner. At the "Down East" sale at Readville two years ago he sold for less than $300 in the Lawson consignment.

The Purbushes captured two out of the four cups, being particularly strong in the pacing division. The two cups for slow trotting and pacing horses, namely, Gene Ashley and Dandy, were not raced for.

CORNELL WON BIG RACE BY SMALL MARGIN

Special to the Boston American.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 27.—As was predicted after the trial, Cornell varsity eight won the intercollegiate regatta on the Hudson river, although only by the narrowest of margins. Columbia crew unexpectedly finished only three feet behind. The time for the winners for the four miles was 20m. 2 2-5s., while Columbia covered the course in 20m. 4s., making but a scant second and three-fifths separating the boats.

Cornell had one of the hardest races of her career, but she had the gamest and most thoroughly versed crew in rowing lore, and won. It was not expected that Coach Rice's boys from Morningside Heights would do so well as second, it being generally conceded that the "Wild Ides" or Syracuse would gain the place position. The Navy crossed the finish line third, and the rest of the crews were strung out along the course, Syracuse not even finishing.

The race was started late, and was fought in the dark, the spectators who lined both sides of the river having only being able to discern the crews, except when they were directly beside them.

Although Coach Courtney's eight won the varsity race, which, of course, was the big thing, he was very much disappointed because of the poor showing of his freshman eight, his men finishing absolutely last, and giving the championship honors of watermanship ever made by an Ithacan crew. Wisconsin won the race with Syracuse second and Penn third. The time for the first and second boats was 9m. 58s. and 10m. 3s., respectively.

Syracuse scored a popular victory in the varsity four-oared race. Cornell, although putting up a ragged race, was second and Penn third. The Trojans did the two miles in 10m. 27 1-5s., with the Ithacans doing it in 10m. 40s.

NELSON'S BOUT WITH BRITT IS POSTPONED

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., June 27.—The Britt-Nelson fight will not take place on the evening of July 4, as was decided at a meeting last night of those interested, at which Manager "Billy" Nolan announced that he had obtained a postponement of the big Nelson's ear, and that an operation had been necessary. The operation was performed Tuesday evening.

It was decided at the meeting to postpone the battle until July 31, at which date the men will meet under the same conditions as agreed upon for July 3. A referee will be selected on July 15.

The rumor spread along Fillmore street early last evening that there was to be a postponement of the Britt-Nelson go and quite a crowd gathered to attend the meeting of Managers Nolan and Willis Britt and promoter Alex Greggains.

Before the meeting began a referee came up Nolan announced that a large abscess had gathered in Nelson's ear and that Tuesday afternoon it became serious enough to call a physician. The medico decided that an operation was necessary and this was performed the same evening.

In view of this unlooked for condition, Nolan asked a postponement of the fight until the latter part of the month. Britt and Greggains agreed and the three managers then met the men at the hotel. Willis Britt announced for his brother that he would not claim Nelson's forfeit, as he was convinced of the genuineness of Nelson's indisposition.

CAMP SAW BALL GAME IN ENGLAND

NEW YORK, June 27.—Walter Camp, the amateur sporting expert and member of the Yale faculty, arrived yesterday on the Cunarder Carmania from Liverpool. Camp had expected to reach here in time for the second Yale-Harvard game, and was extremely sorry when he found that he was too late, but the fact that Yale won did not in the slightest degree disappoint him.

He said that he had seen one game of baseball while he was in England. It was between a number of American students at Oxford and a side made up from the British Freshies and Canadians.

"I arrived at the beginning of the game at 2 o'clock and left at 5 o'clock. At that time the third inning was completed and the score was 50 to 90, or something like it. The English would not like the low-scoring games that we consider good ones. They want runs to be made all the time."

OLDS CAR ON WAY BACK FROM NEW YORK

BY J. C. KERRISON.

There have been endurance contests galore, sealed bonnet contests, hill climbs and less frequency, but the traveling of an automobile long distance with the high speed clutch sealed so that it can only travel on that gear all the distance has not been attempted to any great degree. Al Morrison was the first man to take exception to this and he has proved it. Yesterday sending his record-breaking Oldsmobile touring car from Boston to New York with the high speed clutch sealed.

This was the same car that captured the leading honors at Readville on Memorial Day. It left the headquarters of the Bay State Automobile Association on Dartmouth street at 5 o'clock last evening, after the clutch had been sealed by Secretary James Forrester of the association. Arthur Adams was at the wheel, while others in the car were Fred Allen, who drove so pluckily when the car captured the 100-mile record; Arthur A. Knights and Chester Johnson, the two latter acting as observers. On the trip to New York everything went smooth and well, the car experiencing no great difficulty, it arriving in the city at 7 o'clock this morning.

After the men had enjoyed breakfast, Morrison took the wheel, Adams returning to Boston by train, and started back over the roads. Last night's run was a splendid one, the car taking all the grades between the two points on the high, the seal of the race never once being broken. It was an excellent performance and speaks volumes for Oldsmobile construction and ability.

The car should arrive at the clubhouse in Boston about 6 o'clock this evening, and it will surely be given a rousing reception. Upon his arrival Mr. Forrester will inspect the seal, and the feat will be at an end.

* * *

The club run of the Bay State Automobile Association to Hotel Wentworth at Newcastle on Saturday will be unquestionably the largest gathering of the club this season. The interest in the same is greater and keener than in the three day outing held last month. The run gives the members an opportunity of enjoying a ride at the close of business Saturday noon and of being among their friends at the conclusion of the trip. The touring committee, aided by Frank Hall, has arranged for a pleasant evening of boating and bridge. A programme has been arranged for Sunday morning, it being the intention of the committee to let the tourists enjoy themselves as they best think fit.

* * *

C. F. Whitney of the Park Square Automobile Station has entered a car with Ralph Reffler for the endurance contest of the New England League baseball men, one of those cars at the disposal of the committee to be used in the work of that day. This car will unquestionably be used, as the committee say, and will carry the men who are arranging for the contest over the course during the day. Other cars will be used to send out the checkers and timers.

Brainy Catchers Scarce These Days

BACKSTOPS MAINSTAYS

Crack pitchers are all right—a baseball team has to have them to win a pennant.

Nevertheless teams that have won pennants and have not had consistently strong catchers are as scarce as hen's teeth.

The catcher stands there behind the batter, facing the fastest ones that are coming, taking a pounding and filling a less spectacular role than any other member of the nine. His work is not as showy. Superficially viewed, he is more of a drag upon than any of his fellows, but in reality he is a great power in a team's success, though often he doesn't come in for as much credit as the players who work more in the open, so to speak.

In the old National league days of '70 the Chicagos won the pennant, and they had for catcher Jim White, a lanky stop who used his head. Lew Brown, who caught for the champion Bostons of 1877, was another fielding catcher, as was Charlie Snyder, who caught for the Reds when they won the pennant in 1875.

Here is a list of the pennant winners from that day down to the present together with the principal catchers, and there isn't a backstop in the list who did not use his head as well as his hands:

Star Backstops.

1870, Providence, Lew Brown; '80 and '81, Chicago, Silver Flint; '83, Boston, Myrtle Hackett and Mike Hines; '84, Providence, Gilligan and Nava; '85 and '86, Chicago, Flint; '88, Chicago, Mike Kelly; '87, Detroit, Bennett and Ganzel; '88 and '89, New York, Buck Ewing; '90, Brooklyn, Doc Bushong and Tom Daly; '91 and '92, Boston, Bennett, Ganzel and Kelly; '94, '95 and '96, Baltimore, Robinson; '99 and 1900, Brooklyn, Charlie Farrell and Jim Maguire; '01 and '02, Pittsburg, Zimmer; '04 and '05, New York, Bresnahan; '06, Chicago, Kling.

Great catchers were Bennett, Ewing, Bushong, Kelly, Gilligan, Hackett, Martin Hergen, Robinson and Farrell. And great present-day catchers are George Bresnahan and Johnny Kling, both identified strongly with pennant winners and pronounced factors in the success of the New York and Chicago teams.

Mike Kelly caught for the Boston Brotherhood team, which took won the pennant of that organization in 1890, the only year of its existence. Anyone of Fifty there is in one of the old guides the interesting statement that in a period of thirteen years he caught 835 games of the 1,325 that his club played. Jim McGuire must have a still more extended record of service.

Doc Bushong was with the St. Louis American Association team when it won the pennant under Comiskey in 1885, and Charley Snyder with the Cincinnatis, when they won the American Association flag in 1882. Not all the great catchers have been confined to championship clubs, but a material share of the success of the various pennant winners was due to the presence behind the bat of such masters as Bennett, Ewing, Daly, Bushong, Kling, Bresnahan, Snyder, Kelly, Gilligan, Farrell, Robinson and other experts with both the physical duties of their position was a matter of secondary importance. They were generals, thinkers, planners, originators.

American League successes, too, have been won by teams that possessed this same shrewd, capable type of backstop. As an every department in Billy Sullivan of the World's champion White Sox, Ed Ciriger won the American League pennant in 1900, 1901 and 1902, Sullivan being with them in all of those years.

The catchers of the Athletics, who won the American league pennant in 1902 and 1905, are Schreck and Powers, the latter being a good corral. The peerless Lou Criger was Boston's mainstay behind the plate when that club won the American League pennant in 1903 and 1904.

The world's championship teams since the American National series began have been the Bostons of the American League, the New Yorks of the National League and the Chicagos of the American League. Bill Sullivan, Bresnahan and Criger are the regular catchers for these teams, and the value of each in helping to win the highest honors in baseball is a matter of record.

HARVARD '10 FOUR DEFEATS YALE OARSMEN

NEW LONDON, June 27.—Harvard takes as a good omen for the big varsity eight race to-day their victories yesterday over Yale in the freshman four and pair oar contests, which events signalized the opening of the big regatta between the two famous colleges.

Harvard's freshman four beat Yale, going the mile in 8 min. 32 secs., and the "grads" won their half mile race with the blue in 2 mins. 20 secs. These two races resulted just as expected, as anyone who has seen the rival crews work could not help but pick the crimson for victory in both instances.

Tainted Blood, If Not Treated,

Always leads to blood poison, and blood poison is like a fire in the forest; unchecked it destroys everything before it. Again, if improperly treated, results may be a thousand times worse than the diseases, fatal as it is. It is a serious matter. Do not take chances. I cure tainted and poisoned blood and have you strong, healthy and well. I cure all diseases of men. If you are suffering from

Piles, Fistula, Hydrocele, Varicocele, Paralysis

Partial or Complete Lost Vitality, Nervous Debility, Nervous Dyspepsia, Stricture, Blood Poisoning and all Contracted Diseases

Call and see me. I assure you I can cure; charge only a reasonable sum, and furnish all medicines without extra cost. A personal consultation solicited free.

7,000 ENJOYED PARAGON PARK BEAUTIES FREE

Throng of American Coupon Holders at Electric City Yesterday.

MORE TICKETS ON SUNDAY

Paragon Park received nearly 7,000 BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN coupons Tuesday, indicating the public's appreciation of the Electric City-by-the-Sea and of this newspaper's provision for the comfort of its readers.

All day they thronged to Paragon Park by trainload, carload and boatload to avail themselves of the thirty-five cents' worth of the best Summer park attractions in New England.

Many more coupons appeared to-day the three attractions for SUNDAY AMERICAN readers next week. The practice has been to give coupon holders admission to the park, with its illuminated tower, electrical fountain and chutes and three shows. Next week the public will be admitted to the park, the roller coaster, merry-go-round and a coupon worth fifteen cents toward Bostock's Animal show. The regular admission is twenty-five cents.

This all makes a coupon worth thirty-five cents. To attend next week's outing the messenger and the moon exhibit, the interplanetary representative of the strike baby elephant, which is waiting to be christened, and the whirl of the three-round bout between the husky kangaroo and the fighting eight-year-old, coupons published today hours to be found, the masked lady and the other free Paragon features.

The coupon days for next week will be Monday, day and evening, and Tuesday, until 6 o'clock.

Cold Piano Facts

We don't make any pianos. We don't attract any special pianos. We have nothing special to say about any piano in particular. The Piano Trust is fighting us and we are fighting the Piano Trust tooth and nail. We ask no mercy—we expect none—and we give none. Trust pianos are fine. In fact some of the finest pianos in the world are in the Trust, and we sell those same pianos every week at Trust-fighting prices—Lower, away lower by many dollars than you can buy them any place in this wide world. We lose money, that's all. Well, that's our business. What do you care? You buy while the fight is on; never mind our losses. We'll take care of ourselves. Come this week and see the fight.

An Old Woman in Swimming

We Say OLD WOMAN to Attract Attention—Fifty-Seven Is NOT Old

Mrs. Brandenburger, fifty-seven years old, will compete in a ten-mile swimming race in St. Louis.

She swam a five-mile trial race the other day. Shortly she will enter the ten-mile Marathon race in competition with many men.

In connection with this announcement, we are glad to call attention to the following facts:

It is all nonsense to think that a woman is necessarily OLD when she reaches the age of fifty, or sixty, or SEVENTY.

Mrs. Brandenburger, who is starting out to race in a ten-mile swimming match, is at the age WHICH SHOULD BE THE VERY BEST IN THE LIFE OF EVERY WOMAN.

A woman's good work, her years of interesting life and intellectual pleasures should come rather AFTER fifty than before fifty.

The woman who takes good care of herself is at her very best between fifty and sixty, and she should be in her prime between sixty and seventy.

There is no reason why women should settle down and consider themselves old because they begin to get a few gray hairs.

After fifty a woman is able TO USE HER VITALITY FOR HERSELF. Before fifty THE VITALITY GOES TO THE CHILDREN, TO THE CARE AND WORRY OF MOTHERHOOD.

There was a time in this country when women settled down deliberately to be old when they were thirty-five. They began at that age to take on matronly airs, and by the time they were forty they were all wearing white lace caps, and knitting sleepily, as though life were over.

Fortunately, that is ended. To-day at the age of forty, instead of having a lace cap, the average American woman has a perfectly insane hat and she is looking around for a crazier one. That isn't very wise, but it is at least a sign of life, and that is better than the lace cap.

A woman shouldn't feel old UNTIL SHE IS OLD. And she shouldn't allow others to consider her old or to treat her as old before the time.

The early part of woman's life is made up of self-sacrifice, of worrying for others.

The woman before fifty must think of children and of the husband, of their trials and troubles.

After that she is entitled to have some fun for her reward, and she ought to have it. It is the women of fifty and sixty and seventy that ought to fill the seats at the theatres. It is the women of mature years, able to think, and to advise impartially, that should be THE INFLUENTIAL WOMEN. Mrs. Brandenburger ought not to be an exception, and she WOULDN'T be an exception if women would realize their rights.

The time isn't far off when women are going to vote, and when their numbers AND THEIR SUPERIOR MORAL CHARACTER will improve the world vastly.

A good beginning for all women would be to refuse to admit the reality of old age prematurely. Susan B. Anthony, past eighty, was brighter in mind and in spirit than the average girl of twenty-five, infinitely superior to the average man of twenty-five.

There should be more women of that kind, and MANY of them. For every middle-aged man knocking little white balls around the golf links there should be at least one woman of his age, or older, beating him at the game.

For every middle-aged man amusing himself here and there, there should be a woman as old amusing HERSELF, AND SETTING HIM THE GOOD EXAMPLE HE OFTEN NEEDS.

The end of life comes soon enough, there is no use hurrying it on prematurely.

We advise women to consider themselves young AS LONG AS THEY ARE YOUNG. In their own minds, and by their own feelings, they know how stupid and unjust is the custom that would put a woman to one side as a worn-out machine when in reality her mind and her heart are at their best.

A National Independence League

The announcement from Independence League headquarters that the organization is to be made national is good news for all who believe in actual rather than pretended reform.

The enthusiasm with which the advent of the League has been hailed in other States proves that it is a welcome and permanent movement for the betterment of American politics.

The American people have wearied of being herded into parties. They are tired of following politicians who are in politics for hire and for the profit of corrupt corporations.

The tendency toward independent voting, which has been manifested in recent elections, is still growing. That is the people's only hope. It was the spirit of independence that made this nation, and it is the spirit of independence that must preserve it.

The causes that make the League a power in New York City and State are general throughout the country. The people have come to feel a profound distrust of both old parties. The disclosures of the trust contributions to the last Republican national campaign fund are only equalled by the fact that the Democratic National Executive Committee is made up of men for the most part notorious for corporation associations.

Party government is responsible for present conditions. It can hardly be expected to remove its own handiwork.

The League, out of power, has shown itself more potent for reform than the parties in power. That is because it is sincere, and the people know it is sincere. Simply being in earnest is a force worth reckoning.

The American people are becoming in earnest in dealing with party treachery and corporation rule. It is for that reason they are welcoming, and will continue to welcome, a national Independence League.

The Good Ship Sinker

By Wex Jones

From Steamboat Inspector Snuggins to the Hon. Secretary of Waterways.

SIR—I beg to report that I inspected the S. S. Sinker today, in accordance with your order. The Summer excursion season is now in full swing, so this is an excellent time to prepare for it.

(1) I went on board the Sinker yesterday and suddenly ordered the fire bell rung. The alacrity of the crew was remarkable. They all jumped overboard inside of thirty seconds, except one man, and he hit his knee against the railing. This was a remarkable test, and although the crew might be impeded by passengers if the boat was crowded, I think they should be allowed to pass. I may mention that not one of these men was ever on board a steamship before getting their jobs on the Sinker.

(2) The fire hose was in excellent order, nicely painted white. The captain said he did not like to turn water through it as it would burst and the company would charge him for it. His remarks were reasonable, so I did not order a water test.

(3) Life preservers. In first-class shape. The regulations require that each shall weigh 45 pounds. Some of those I weighed tipped the beam at 150 pounds. The number was one short, but the captain explained that it was being used as an anchor, so I allowed it to pass.

(4) The maximum number of passengers which should be carried by the Sinker is 250. Usually in the Summer she carries only 90, so the margin of safety is strictly observed.

(5) The chief engineer of the Sinker is an experienced man, as he ran the freight elevator in a factory for twenty-five years before taking his present position. He has the boilers in excellent shape, as there are not more than twenty or thirty holes large enough to put your finger through.

(6) The Sinker is fully equipped with boats, carrying three, with a combined capacity of twenty persons, in case of accident it is thus clear that fifty or sixty trips by these boats would remove to safety all the crew and the passengers. It takes the crew three or four hours to get out two of the boats, which are usually utilized as storerooms by the cook. This is to be remedied next season, when the cook will be given an icebox.

(7) Recommendations.—I recommend that the Sinker be given an extra coat of red lead, as the holes in some of the plates are likely to alarm unthinking passengers. With this work—which can be done next Winter—the Sinker will be in first-class condition for the Summer excursion traffic.

Respectfully,

JNO. SNUGGINS.

Few things are impossible to diligence and skill.—JOHNSON.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Vast Changes in Present Conditions Are Sure to Come, and It Is Well to Be Ready for Them

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

BEFORE you blame anybody for any injustice, look into the cause of things. In almost every country town heads of families are blaming the shopkeepers, the grocers and meat sellers for exorbitant prices demanded.

Again, rents cause citizens in all parts of the United States to cry out against the landlords' greed.

In return the shopkeepers, the market people and the landlords complain of unpaid bills and slow books with long accounts unsettled. And so the aggressive and dissatisfied thought currents fill the air.

Meantime, few go back to the real cause, the monopolies and trusts.

The man who sells groceries and the man who sells meats are not grinding the poor; the man who acts as landlord to the people who live in tenements is not a devil going about to seek whom he may devour.

Back of all these middlemen, who are merely trying to make a living (like all the rest of the working world), lies the system.

Economic Wrongs

A GROCER'S wife, with tears in her eyes, told me of the dissatisfaction of their customers over the increased prices, for which the grocers were not responsible, and of her own dissatisfaction at the inability of many of their customers to pay. An hour later a little booklet, written by a woman, came to my hand:

I quote from it. The booklet is by Virginia M. Woodward, and is called "Parental Rights and Economic Wrongs."

"The great villainies of life are not individual crimes, but the results of corrupt systems. The individual crime only affects individuals. Its sphere of operation and the term of its results are limited, while the effects of the villainous system are constant, reaching every individual, and generating a host of supplementary evils.

"It is impossible that a system founded on injustice can work justice, even partially or temporarily. It can confer benefits only by favoring some at the expense of others, and in proportion as the favored are few and greatly favored, the victims will be many and greatly defrauded.

"Everything man eats, wears or uses in any way can be directly traced back to the natural resources of the earth. Man can no more live without land than he can live without air. He may live in the fifteenth story of a city skyscraper and be ignorant of the difference between sand and soil, but his existence depends as absolutely upon land as does the building in which he lives. His food, his clothing, his furniture, his tools—everything whatsoever that he uses or possesses comes from the soil.

"Cotton must grow and sheep must graze, and the leather that he uses depends upon the cattle ranges. Wood comes from the forest that no man planted, and coal from the mines that were stored by nature.

"All the natural wealth that should have served as a reserve provision for future generations has been surrendered into the hands of men who have become billionaires thereby."

The System

HERE is the cause of all the troubles of which the middle class people of America complain. Not one grocer, shopkeeper or tradesman in one hundred looks back to the beginning of the present conditions, all acknowledge those conditions to be unfortunate, and vain ideas of bettering them by electing a new Mayor or tax assessor or Governor are indulged in. But while political rulers change, the system does not alter.

The book says of the part played by the government:

"The government that urges fathers and mothers to produce children regardless of conditions, at their own expense and for the benefit of others, will not restore to the disinherited their share of nature's riches, nor establish an equitable system of taxation which will produce the revenue of the country from its natural community wealth.

"It will not take the children out of the cotton mills of the South or the breakers of the North, by making the wages of the father adequate to the needs of food and fuel, clothing and shelter for the family. It will accept no responsibility for the family of the individual except the responsibility of the almshouse and the jail."

Let the People Unite

JUST so long as the people are indifferent to the cause of these conditions, just so long as they fretfully complain of one another and ignore the cause, that cause will continue to make bad grow worse.

Once the people are awakened and united in a determined effort to change things the change will come.

Later in this column will be given some facts concerning what the Single Tax people of the United States are doing in a practical way to lessen the power of the monopolists.

For they are doing things. And vast changes are imminent.

It is just as well to read up a little and be prepared for them.

Meantime stop finding fault with your neighbors.

All are in the grasp of the same octopus and should sympathize one with another and join hands in an effort to tear away the tentacles of the monster.

In union lies power
